Survey Reveals Consumers Don't Understand Biotech

N.J. Vegetable Meeting Unveils Surprising Results

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Less than half — only 41 percent — of Americans are aware that foods with biotech ingredients are on supermarket shelves, according to a recent survey.

And 75 percent of those polled rated their understanding of food production as "excellent," while only 5 percent rate their understanding as "poor," said Dr. William Hallman.

Hallman, associate director of the Food Policy Institute at Rutgers/Cook College, spoke about the public perception of ag biotechnology in the U.S. in 2001.

Hallman spoke to about 100 growers and agri-industry representatives Wednesday at the New Jersey Annual Vegetable Meeting at the Trump Taj Mahal in Atlantic City.

The survey, conducted in April last year through the institute, included 1,200 adults in a carefully constructed phone interview that addressed many biotech issues.

What they found: the American public is woefully uninformed about exactly what biotechnology means and its impact on how food is produced.

Hallman said of those interviewed (made up of half male and half female respondents), "Many people have a poor grasp of basic ecological and environmental concepts," he noted. Results pointed out: only half of those interviewed even heard about traditional crossbreeding methods.

In the educational section of the testing, only 40 percent of Americans got seven or more out of nine questions to pass the test. One of the questions was: if a person eats genetically modified (GM) fruit, will they also be modified? The correct answer, false, was answered correctly by two-thirds of those polled. Yet on a similar question conducted in 2000 in Europe, only 40 percent answered correctly.

The answers from the true or false questions were "off the cuff," and typically showed the analysts, according to Hallman, that the respondents' opinions are "not well thought out, not strongly held, subject to change, and are heavily influenced by the wording of the question."

For those in the U.S., Hallman said, biotechnology is "an abstract concept for many. It's not high on the agenda, and they are not focused to make personal decisions about it."

Hallman noted one question, "for tomatoes genetically modified with the catfish gene, would they taste fishy?" The answer clearly is false, yet "one-third of the Americans were not sure if it was false," said Hallman.

The terms "GM," "biotechnology," and "genetic engineering" all refer to the effort to use technological methods to speed up traditional crossbreeding techniques to promote value-added or enhanced ag products.

Va. Farm Show Scheduled In The Heart Of Shenandoah Valley

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

FISHERSVILLE (Augusta County, Va.) — On Jan. 22-23 at Expoland, the 2002 Virginia Farm Show is set in the heart of the Shenandoah Valley, in proximity to much of the state's diverse farming operations, primarily poultry, beef, sheep, dairy, and horses.

The event also attracts attendance from producers in surrounding states.

"We did the show in Richmond several years and it was a good crop show," said Ken Maring, trade show manager for Lee Publications which owns and operates the show.

"But we couldn't draw farmers from the Shenandoah Valley because it was a 2½-hour drive. On request from exhibitors," he said, "we moved the show to the Shenandoah Valley. It is a great location. The show encompasses all agriculture in Virginia."

The relocation means an advantage for eager farmers who are anticipating the opportunity to make comparisons between products that will run the gamut from machinery and equipment to heating and irrigation systems to recycling, chemicals, genetics, fertilizers, seeds, and so on.

On tap, also, will be a skid-steer rodeo.

"The new technology will get their brains going," commented Steve Saufley. Saufley represents six counties in the Virginia State Farm Bureau Association and hopes the farmers will allow the concepts they see to enlarge the scope of ideas they hold about running their operations.

Speaking of new ideas, Mike and Susan Phillips from outside Broadway in Rockingham County will be fielding questions about a product they recently became acquainted with and are using themselves. It's called Bermudagrass.

Susan said they are well aware it will take a lot of convincing for Bermudagrass to catch on. Since the couple stepped out in faith to plant Bermudagrass (it does well in hot weather), they hope to prove something in the rotational

Md. Teen Crowned Miss American Angus

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

SYKESVILLE, Md. — Nov. 12 will always be an anniversary day for Cortney Hill-Dukehart. A sort of a second birthday, a day that marked a major event in her life.

On the last day of the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE), she was given the national title of Miss American Angus in Louisville, Ky.

A freshman at Howard Community College, Cortney, 18, is the daughter of Robert Hill and Marlene Dukehart, owners of 18-acre Sunrise Sunset Farm, Sykesville, Md.

"So far I've met so many people. I want to represent the Angus breed the best way I can," said Cortney.

To Compete

She began her quest for the crown by filling out a scholarship application. "You can only apply your graduating year of high school," she said. "You apply at your state auxiliary and then the winners are sent to the national auxiliary. From there, the top five scholarships are chosen and those five compete for Miss American Angus."

To compete in the contest, the three girls, applicants who had first won at state level, came Saturday and filled in a three-page fill-in-the-blank and essay test about the Angus industry. The auxiliary had previously sent the girls a large packet of information for them to study, said Cortney.

A few weeks before the contest the girls received the topic for their five-to-seven minute public speech.

The speech was followed by a 20-minute interview with judge, and then an impromptu question in front of the public, where the girls answered why they would want to be Miss Angus America.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH

SO SAY THE SUNBEAMS . . .

St Vincent s Day January 22, brings this cheerful advice Remember on St Vincent s Day If the Sun his beams display / Be sure to mark the transient beam / Which through the casement sheds a gleam For us a token bright and clear, / Of prosperous weather all the year Heralded for its weather lore St Vincent s Day is still heartily celebrated in many winemaking towns in Spain and France A sunny day signifies more wine than water and means that the sap might begin to rise in the branches Frost on that day presages a delayed crop whether for wine or rye On the feast day of this patron of winemakers and drunkards, no vines could be pruned

Is Our Future Draining Away?

David E. Hess, Secretary
Department Of Environmental Protection

Water is one of our most precious resources. Yet we know little about how much water we have and how it is used.

What we do know, and what many people are surprised to learn, is this:

- Drought emergencies have been declared in four of the last six years.
- Some water suppliers lose up to 40 percent of their water between treatment plants and the faucet because of old, leaky pipes.
- Average per-person water use has increased from five to 62 gallons per day over the last 100 years.
- 15,000 new wells are drilled annually, yet no construction standards exist to protect groundwater.

People suffer when water isn't available for drinking. Our economy suffers when water isn't available for industry. Aquatic life and delicate hydrologic systems suffer when there isn't enough water to sustain their natural functions.

There is growing concern that what we don't know about water will hurt us.

At Water Forums all across Pennsylvania this past spring, hundreds of Pennsylvanians shared what they thought were the most critical water-resource issues.

To address these concerns, the Schweiker Administration has outlined a water-resources initiative that will accomplish four objectives that were recommended at these water forums:

- First, to lay a foundation for future decisions, we need to update the State Water Plan. We need to gather data on how much water we have, how it's being used, and what we'll need to meet future demand. Legislation is needed to require the registration of major water users. And a new Water Resources Advisory Committee is needed to assist in the planning process.
- Second, we need to use the plan to identify "critical water planning areas" — watersheds covering multiple municipalities where water demands now, or will in the future, outstrip available supplies. Legislation should establish a public process for designating a representative government or organization that will create a detailed area "water budget." This group should include all local stakeholders. And an action plan should identify ways to resolve local water problems with local, regional, state, or even federal resources.
- Third, a new program promoting efficient use of existing water supplies should address water conservation education and technologies for home and business use.
- Fourth, because so many people depend on water wells, construction standards should be established for the siting, construction, and abandonment of wells. And licensing and education requirements should be established for water-well drillers.
- Sen. Jim Gerlach and Rep. Art Hershey have introduced legislation (Senate Bill 1230 and House Bill 2230) that addresses exactly these objectives. The legislation has bipartisan support, and the Department of Environmental Protection looks forward to the first legislative hearings on this important issue early in the year.

The successful "Growing Greener" Watershed Protection Program has created unprecedented awareness of water-quality issues. We now have an opportunity to lay a foundation to address some of Pennsylvania's most basic concerns about water resources.

We need to take "Growing Greener" further and promote a watershed-based approach for dealing with water quantity issues.

If we don't, we could literally see our future drain away.

To Welcome Our New Regional Poultry Agent

Dr. Gregory P. Martin began his new assignment as our capitol region poultry agent Jan. 10. He received his bachelor's degree in poultry and his master's in business administration from California Polytechnic University at San Luis Obispo. After completing his doctorate in poultry science at Texas A & M, Martin served several years as the business manager of the Poultry Science Association. Having worked extensively with computer software applications, he was responsible for the maintenance of the organization's Website in addition to handling the daily management and direction of this scientific organization.

Proficient in all areas of poultry production, Martin has worked in every phase of the industry. From packing turkeys to mixing feed to managing a layer operation, he has been educated by academic study of poultry science as well as hands-on industry training. A member of CAST, Gamma Sigma Delta Agricultural Honor Fraternity and Blue Key, Martin is an experienced teacher. He is a member of several professional organizations and served as the adviser to the Texas A & M Poultry Science Club.

Martin is also active in writing and has several publications to his credit. In addition, he has written and developed four types of computer software — some specific to the agricultural business needs. He will be working out of the Lancaster County Extension Office and can be reached at (717) 394-6851. In addition to Lancaster County, Martin will be working in Lebanon, Dauphin, York, Cumberland, Franklin, and Adams counties.

To Provide Proper Winter Feed For Beef Cows

Dr. John Comerford, Penn State Extension beef specialist, tells us there are three basic factors which need to be considered when one evaluates the winter-feed requirements of beef cows. First, one needs to consider the impact of temperature on the maintenance energy requirements of the cows. The requirements increase by about 1 percent for each 1 degree Fahrenheit (F), below 32 degrees F. The energy for maintenance of beef cows in the last ⅓ of pregnancy is about 11 megacalories per day. With an air temperature in dry air and no wind of 22 degrees F, there will be a 10 percent greater energy requirement. The extra 1.1 megacalories of energy needed at this temperature is equivalent to about one pound of corn or two pounds of orchardgrass hay.

The second factor one needs to account for when adjusting feed energy is wind chill. For example, if the wind chill is zero F, then the cow requires 32 percent more energy. This is about 3 pounds of corn or 5-6 pounds of orchardgrass hay.

The final factor that impacts feed needs is whether an animal is wet. This is the most important condition to consider, since when the animal gets wet the hair and hide lose their insulation capacity. The rule to use when the cattle are wet is to use 59 degrees F as the starting point and change the feed needs by 2 percent for each degree below 59 degrees F. For example, if the cattle are wet and the wind chill is 9 degrees F, the energy requirement is 100 percent higher. This is equivalent to feeding an additional 20 pounds of corn or 40 pounds of hay to a cow each day. Obviously, most cows could not consume enough feed to keep them at maintenance under these conditions, so they will start losing body condition. Building a windbreak or shelter from the rain is both economically feasible and is good animal husbandry.

To Earn Pesticide Update Certification Credits

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County agronomy agent, reminds us the time of the year is here to obtain those needed pesticide-training credits. Information on when and where the training meetings are held is now available on the Internet as well as by phone.

Computer users who use the web to get information can now find pesticide update training meetings listed on the Web at http://www.pested.psu.edu/frame.html. Once you are at this site you select the specific core or category credit you need, select the PDA Region most convenient to for you to attend a meeting, then click on the search button. After a short time for the search to be completed, your screen will show a table listing date, title, number of credits, location, and contact name and telephone number for more information.

A phone with a Faxback system is available for those who don't have a computer but do have a fax. Use the phone on your fax to call (814) 865-1632. After a short welcome to the system, you will select the pesticide information by pressing a 1. The voice prompt will then ask you to select the PDA region you are interested in. PDA Regions are numbered from one through seven, and eight is used for out of state meetings. Lancaster and surrounding counties are in Region 6. After making your choice, the voice prompt will then tell you to press the start button on the fax machine. The fax will be on its way.

If you have only a phone, you can get information from Oct. 1 through March 31 by calling 1-800-PENN-IPM (1-800-736-6476). You must have a touchtone telephone to operate the system. When the phone is answered, a voice prompt will then ask you to select "1" for pesticide information. The prompter then asks you to select the PDA region you are interested in. See above for more details.

The voice prompter will then ask you to select the core or category that you are interested in. Core will be listed as 00 and categories are 01 through 25. After you have made all your selections, the voice will begin reading the meetings in alphabetical order by county in the region selected. They will be listed chronologically in each county by date. You will get the date, number of credits, and contact telephone number for each meeting.

Anderson suggests if you need pesticide update training begin early to find out where meetings are available. As the winter progresses the number of meetings declines. Very few meeting are available in late March.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WORSHIPING THE RIGHT WAY

Background Scripture:
Isaiah 58.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 58:10-14.:4-9.

Back in the 1960s, when much of Christendom was in a renewal ferment, I was invited by a local Roman Catholic's convent to participate and preach in their midweek mass. Coming from a more or less informal wing of Protestantism, I was rather concerned about participating in their mass in the "right way."

On the appointed day I dug out and dusted off my clerical color and vest. I was determined that I would do whatever I was going to do in the "right way."

The appointed hour of mass was noon, and I arrived at 11:30, so that I could adequately prepare myself. But I waited alone in the vestry until several nuns with guitars and tambourines smiled at me as they passed through. At 11:56 a.m. a young man in a crew sweater — a priest, I learned came bustling into the vestry.

"Rev. Althouse, I presume?" he said, not too unlike Spencer Tracy greeting Dr. Livingston in darkest Africa. Nodding nervously, I cut to the chase: "What am I supposed to do?"

"Oh," he exclaimed airily, "we'll just wing it!"

And we did. All my expectations about what Roman Catholics thought was the "right way" to worship were substantially changed by that experience.

An Obsession

Still, over my years in the church I have observed that lots of people have an obsession to discover and affiliate with "the right way" to be a Christian. For some, that means following a certain liturgy or order of worship, including or excluding various elements and practices, and building a house of worship in a prescribed manner. For others, it is a matter of believing the "right beliefs," subscribing to various doctrines, and articulating our faith in the words of this or that creed.

This is the issue in Isaiah 58. The people purportedly complain to God that he has not responded to their fasting: "Why have we fasted, and thou seest it not?" Is there something wrong with our technique? But the prophet quickly lets them know that it is not technique but their motivation and the fruits of it. "Behold, in the day of your fast you seek of your own pleasure, and oppress all your workers. Behold you fast only to quarrel and fight and to hit with wicked fist" (3b, 4a).

So how shall they fast in an acceptable manner? Actually, it is an amazingly simple answer that Isaiah gives them: "Is not this the fast that I choose: to loose the bonds of wickedness, to undo the thongs of the yoke, to let the oppressed go free, and to break every yoke? Is it not to share your bread with the hungry, and to bring the homeless poor into your house; when you see the naked, to cover him . . . ?"

Pointing The Finger

How we love to make Christianity difficult, complex, and academic, but Isaiah tells the people that the "right" way to worship and serve God is remarkably easy to understand: "If you take away from the midst of you the yoke, the pointing of the finger, and speaking wickedness, if your pour yourself out for the hungry and satisfy the desire of the afflicted, then shall your light rise in the darkness . . ." (vs. 9,10).

I have known many churches that have closed their doors because of disputes over the "right beliefs" and "right practices," but never any congregation that dissolved because it poured itself out for the "hungry," sacrificed itself for "the afflicted," or spent too much helping the "oppressed go free." (If you know of one, let me know).

I am not saying that beliefs, doctrines, creeds, and liturgies are not important, but that, unless they result in sharing your bread with the hungry, they have become a dangerous and hypocritical substitute for true Christian discipleship. It does not so much concern me that there are lots of Christians who articulate their faith differently than I do. I am pained that these words keep followers of Jesus Christ from sharing the same bread and cup and prevent us from working side by side in "the right way" to serve God.

Farm Wives: Rotational Grazing Easier, Safer, More Rewarding

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

KIRKWOOD (Chester Co ) — If mama ain t happy ain't nobody happy is an often heard quote One of the ways to keep mama happy according to several farm wives interviewed is to use rotational grazing

It is the most sensible way to farm Financial investment is much less than with conventional farming methods and it s much safer said Caroline Landis who with her husband Arden operate a 140 acre dairy farm in Chester County

Her sentiments are echoed by Carol Greathouse Mercer County who said The only machinery we have is a golf cart that we drive back and forth to move the tape to section off paddocks on 160 acres There s no equipment to worry about with having our small children working side by side with us '

In Loysville, June Hertzler is a vocal advocate of rotational grazing It's what enabled her and her husband Duane to transform their 370-acre farm with 250 Holsteins from debt ridden to profitable

The male farmer is most often the outspoken supporter or critic of farming methods But in the majority of farms, the wife is as involved in day to-day chores and is qualified to voice her opinion of what works and what doesn t

Here's a peek into the lives of three women who are active growers

Carol Greathouse

Carol grew up on a Jersey farm in Berks County She worked for the Jersey Association and, through her responsibilities as informational director, met her husband-to-be David, who was already operating a Jersey dairy farm in Illinois.

After marriage, the couple settled on his Illinois farm, but Carol said 'We had little dairy support and agricultural services in that area. So the couple moved to Carol s family's farm and worked for her parents for three years while looking for a place to call their own

They did not want to settle in an area with land development pres

Duane E Pysher
Grassland Management Specialist

I was at the Conservation Education Area of Ag Progress Days from Aug 14 to 16 where we held a grazing forum each day at 11 a m in the presentation tent

I had a dairy a beef and a sheep producer on the panel to tell their story as to how why when and where they do what they do in a grazing system

We hear the producer s side of the grazing story Some come with pictures or graphs or printed copies of their story but they all share their experiences Folks in the audience are able to ask the panelists questions about grazing and their operations

As I was sitting here reflecting on some comments made by several panelists I realized that they were discussing operations with low dollar investments in machinery I have to chuckle because there we were at Ag Progress Days surrounded by all the latest in brightly colored high technology farm machinery and most of the grazers on the panel were discussing low technology Quite a contrast

In fact the grazing forum was being conducted at the same time as field demonstrations of forage harvesting equipment The size of the audience that black smoke and whirling gears attracted was much larger than the audience I had for the grazing forums Ironically how ever I was hearing about how the grazers are making money paying taxes and not worrying about making the large investment in steel that their counterparts who were in that large audience are having to make

When did we as a society change our way of thinking about taking livestock from a normal grazing scenario to one where they are con

"We would use slats again if doing it all over!"

Harold Keeney; David, Nancy & Mark Wolfskill

Our original plan was to install scrapers. But after 10 minutes in a slatted barn in Somerset County, we changed our minds. Some people stay away from slats because of the initial cost, but that extra cost is made up for in the first couple years.

The one thing I like the most about slats is that there is no expense. I don't have any scrapers or drive units to maintain. I don't have to run scrapers every day or haul manure like we did in our previous tie stall barn. The cows' foot health has been a lot better, and the cows stay much cleaner. Our milk production is up and the somatic cell count has gone down. I give at least some of the credit to the slats because with less moisture on the floor, there is less bacteria.

-David Wolfskill

"The answer to the most common question is 'No, there is no build-up.' "

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Jan. 11. Receipts: This week 238,900; last week 41,400; year ago 276,400. This week's reported volume included 49% over 600 lbs. Compared to last week: feeder steers and heifers opened the week slightly higher, especially on heavier weights that have a chance to finish with an April basis. However, pressure late in the week quickly forced prices south and the yearling market finished the week steady to 2.00 lower. Steer and heifer calves traded steady to 2.00 higher this week with good demand reported in most areas by the USDA's Livestock Market News Service.

Many markets, especially in the Southeast, are just now getting back to business following the holiday break, so price comparisons were difficult. Buyers ganged up on heavy yearlings in hopes of hitting this spring's projected lull in market-ready slaughter cattle. These cattle will have to hurry to be fat in time, but things may work out if the weather continues mild and feedlot performances remain outstanding.

Cattle feeders are just desperate to find something that will work and a simple breakeven would be great, compared to these triple-digit per head losses. Trading activity slowed late in the week and buyers turned cautious. Packers used their favorite haggling technique by holding feedlots at bay amid higher market indicators, until the futures turned lower on Thursday and then offered steady money.

This week's 3-day Superior Video Auction featured 90,000 head of feeder cattle and calves. Thursday's early trading was active and prices were generous on predominantly yearlings in the South Central Region. However, Friday's video sales were much calmer with the fancier North-Central Region yearlings selling for less with additional pressure from sharply lower CME Feeder Cattle Futures.

Dressed beef prices have held their own following the holidays, but heavy carcasses continue to weigh on the market's potential. The heavier weights are not necessarily from putting-off fat cattle sales, but rather an attempt by feeders to hit the sweet spots in grid pricing. Feedlots must put weight on, to take advantage of cheap feed and achieve the marbling required for premiums.

The cattle feeders that are still selling on a negotiated price are paying the penalty for these heavier cattle. Despite the slim chance of making a dollar, buyers continue to pay more for feeder cattle than their pencil's say they should. The same is true for farmers and backgrounders, who continue to pay well over 1.00 per pound for five-weight steer calves It's not that they think they can make it work, it's only that they already have the facilities and the feed and it's what they've always done. This perspective makes the cow-calf business look appealing. Now, get ready to pay near a thousand dollars per head for bred heifers or young bred cows and try to compete with millionaires and conservationists for some ranch ground

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State

Jan. 14, 2002

Cheese Prices Strengthen

- Blocks and barrels higher.
- Butter edges up.
- Demand picture for 2001 mixed.
- Global price for nonfat weakens.

Cheese and butter prices edged up slightly last week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Blocks rose from $1.2550 per pound on Monday, Jan. 7 to $1.3450 Friday, Jan. 11. Barrels rose from $1.2550 per pound on Monday to $1.3150 by Friday.

USDA reports that some traders are questioning whether these price increases are justified by supply and demand. That means it is possible these increases are short term.

Grade AA butter prices rose from $1.35 per pound on Monday to $1.3750 by Friday. Only 7 carloads of butter traded hands. Again, traders are questioning the price increase since most anticipated lower prices after the holidays. USDA reports that churning activity across the country is strong, cream is readily available, and stocks of butter are readily available.

USDA released an estimate of demand for dairy products for 2001. During the period August-October 2001, consumption of dairy products relative to the same period a year ago were as follows: butter 5.6 percent, American cheese 1.6 percent, other cheese 7.0 percent, nonfat dry milk 38.0 percent, and fluid milk products 0.6 percent.

So what does this data for consumption mean? It suggests what we already know: that demand for cheese and butter slowed significantly the last quarter of 2001. Some of this decrease was related to the events surrounding Sept. 11 and some because of a slowing U.S. economy. Some was related to the strong wholesale/retail prices. That was likely the reason for the reduction in butter consumption.

On the other hand, the strong demand for nonfat dry milk was probably related to the fact that cheaper supplies of protein from overseas was not available. So, domestic nonfat dry milk was used instead. Also, the milk supply was tight, making domestic use of powder in cheese vats an alternative to using skim milk.

The domestic price of nonfat dry milk is very close to the support level of $0.90 per pound. Western nonfat dry milk last week was mostly $0.90-0.9250 per pound. The global price of nonfat dry milk is dropping rapidly. The Northern EU price fell from $1 per pound in January 2001 to $0.76 by December. This has big implications for the U.S.

If the global price continues to fall, it will become more profitable to import Milk Protein Concentrates than to use domestic sources of nonfat dry milk in cheese production. That will pressure the USDA to lower the powder support price. Also, more nonfat dry milk will enter the dairy price support program, and DEIP bonuses will have to be bigger. This will increase the cost of running these two programs.

Brymesser Farms Tops In Cumberland County DHIA

The herd of Brymesser Farms, Boiling Springs was recognized for their production of milk and protein. The farms' 245 registered and grade Holstein cows produced an average of 26,989 pounds milk and 830 pounds of protein — that means each one of their cows produced an average of over 13 ton of milk. That was enough to make them top herd in milk and protein in the county this past year.

Cow #215 in the herd of Nealand Farms, Newville, was high cow in the county in milk and protein production (3X). Their cow in 305 days produced 45,149 pounds of milk and 1,288 pounds of protein.

Bry-Nel-Dane Avonne, a registered Holstein in the Brymesser herd, had the high 2X milk and protein 305 day record. She produced 42,393 pounds of milk and 1,176 pounds of protein.

Jet Rae Farm of Shippensburg was honored for having the lowest Somatic Cell County (SCC) yearly average in the county. Nealand Farms, Newville, received second place honors. Rounding out the top five were Hidden View Farm, Newville; Mayapple Farm, Carlisle; and Hensel Hill Farm, Newburg.

Brymesser Farms were honored for having both the high 2 year old in protein and the high 2 year old in milk (2X). The high 2 year old in protein was a registered Holstein Bry-Nel Charm 7005 producing 966 pounds of protein. The high 2 year old in milk 2X was Bry-Nel Marconi 7044 with 30,720 pounds of milk.

Nealand Farms' cow #148 received recognition for high 2 year old (3X) for producing 33,242 pounds milk in 305 days.

The herd of Sheldon Brymesser and Sons (Brymesser Farms) was recognized at the 82nd annual meeting for placing first in the Cumberland County Herd Management Awards Program. The herd earned a total score of 103 points. The herds earned points because they excel in several herd management areas such as — increase of milk, fat and protein production; sustained production for milk, fat and protein over last year and two years ago; somatic cell counts improvement; days open; number of services per pregnancy and age at first calving.

Hidden View Farm, Newville, placed second with a Score 90. Nealand Farms, Newville, with a score of 79 placed third; Jet-Rae Farm, Shippensburg with a score of 66 and J. Paul Strock, Mechanicsburg with a score of 55 placed fourth and fifth respectively.

In the business portion of the meeting Loren Hoover Boiling Springs and Doug Lehman, Carlisle, were selected to three-year terms on the Cumberland County Advisory DHI Committee.

Dairylea Named One Of Top 100 Cooperatives

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Syracuse-based Dairylea Cooperative, Inc. has been named one of the top 100 cooperatives in the country by National Cooperative Bank (NCB). In their annual list of the "Top 100," Dairylea ranked 41 of more than 47,000 cooperatives in the U.S.

Now in its ninth year, NCB's "Top 100" list spotlights the nation's most successful cooperatives that have generated at least $287 million in revenue in 2000.

Dairylea is named regularly in NCB's top 100. "We are pleased to consistently achieve this standing" said Dairylea CEO Richard P. Smith. "It certainly is indication of the success and strength of the members of Dairylea and of cooperative structure."

With more than 2,500 member farms located throughout the Northeast, Dairylea Cooperative's annual sales approached $1 billion. Founded in 1908, today they market more than 5.5 billion pounds of milk on an annual basis, making them the largest milk-marketing organization in the Northeast.

Through its holding company, Agri-Services, LLC, Dairylea provides a variety of resources for its member farms, including insurance coverage, loan programs, milk price risk management services, livestock marketing, and investment and retirement planning.

Through Dairy Marketing Services (DMS), its joint venture with Dairy Farmers of America's Northeast Council, Dairylea assists in managing a milk marketing system that includes more than 7,000 farms and 11.5 billion pounds annually.

According to NCB, a democratic and open relationship provide a solid foundation for a successful cooperative thus enabling them to offer maximum benefits to its members.

Farm Link Plans Beginning Farmer Workshop

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — With less than two percent of Americans calling themselves farmers and many of those earning more than half of their income off the farm, beginners ask, "How can I get into farming in the current farm economy? What does it take? "

Pennsylvania Farm Link's Beginning Farmer workshop on Feb. 16 will emphasize that a successful farm start-up is not dependent on age, size, type of farm operation, or previous career selection. Instead, success relies more on negotiating a good fit between your personal and financial resources, your farm and family goals, and the way you decide to enter farming. High school and college students, as well as adults who are considering a career in farming, are urged to attend.

Keynote speaker, Kathleeen Kelley, a cattle rancher from Colorado, will tell us her views on how beginners can survive and make a go of it in very difficult conditions. She believes that risk taking is essential to the survival of agriculture in our country and will tell us her views on how "creative new entrepreneurs are our best hope. "

Melanie Dietrick, who is working on her parents' farm, will address her efforts to expand the family's resources through value-added production.

Master Farmer Phoebe Bitler will describe her start-up strategies on non-family dairy farms leading to the eventual purchase of their own farm and their succeeding efforts to help beginners.

Ways to start from scratch will be addressed by Allen Kemmerer who currently operates a wholesale vegetable operation.

Afternoon sessions will include on farm apprenticeships including some real life examples of apprentices and mentors who experience a successful working relationship.

Diversification strategies though adding value to raw farm products and side-line ventures such as raising breeding stock, farm tours, and custom work for other farmers will be highlighted.

Beyond inspiration, participants will receive practical knowledge and advice on how to convince your banker you have what it takes, protect your land and water resources, protect your investment through crop insurance, develop a marketing plan, learn how to scout out market leads, and a hands-on approach to developing your business plan.

The workshop will be held on Saturday, Feb. 16 at the Holiday Inn in Grantville, from 8 to 4. The cost of the workshop is $30 for an individual, $50 for a couple and $20 for a student. Registration and payment is required by Feb. 12 and includes lunch. Please contact Pennsylvania Farm Link at 717-664-7077 or email at pafarmlink@redrose.net for more information and a brochure.

Pennsylvania Farm Link is a non-profit organization governed by a Board of Directors representing diverse agricultural interests and works to "create farming opportunities for the next generation."

Environmental Program Sign Up Ends Feb. 8

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Farm Service Agency is accepting applications through Feb. 8 for the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP). This sign up period will address the Statewide Resource Concerns only. A later sign-up period will be held for farms located in the Chickies Watershed.

EQIP works primarily in areas where there are significant natural resource concerns, such as soil erosion, water quality and quantity, wildlife habitat, wetlands, and forest and grazing lands.

Priority is given to areas where State or local governments offer financial, technical, or educational assistance and to areas where agricultural improvements will help meet water quality objectives. Activities must be carried out according to a conservation plan.

EQIP offers financial, educational, and technical help to install or implement structural, vegetative, and management practices called for in five- to 10-year contracts. These practices — which include manure management systems, pest management and erosion control — help improve and maintain the health of natural resources.

Cost sharing may pay up to 75 percent of the costs of certain conservation practices. Nationally, half of the funding for EQIP is targeted to livestock-related natural resource concerns and the remainder to other significant conservation priorities.

Contracts are awarded on a competitive basis among a pool of 14 counties in south central Pennsylvania. Proposals are ranked using a scoring system based on ballpark estimates of total program costs of the practices planned. Requests can be made at the Farm Service Agency, located at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster, or phone (717) 397-6235.

Pennsylvanians Encouraged To Attend Environmental Education Meetings

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary David E. Hess recently encouraged citizens to attend one of several public sessions to be held this spring on recommendations outlined in the "Pennsylvania Environmental Readiness for the 21st Century" report.

"This first-of-its-kind report identified 12 challenges to increasing the public's understanding of environmental issues," Secretary Hess said.

"We'd like to hear ideas from as many Pennsylvanians as possible on how we might meet these challenges."

The report by the Pennsylvania Center for Environmental Education (PCEE) includes the results of a survey of Pennsylvania adults on their knowledge of, attitudes toward and behaviors related to the environment.

The report identified educational issues in the following 12 areas: biodiversity; hazardous waste; air quality; renewable resources; water quality; wetlands; suburban sprawl; non-point source pollution; energy; watershed management; solid waste; and sustainable development.

"The survey found that Pennsylvanians want to take personal responsibility for helping to solve the state's environmental problems, but they — like the nation as a whole — currently have little knowledge of major environmental issues," PCEE Director Paulette Johnson said. "It's our goal to come up with ways to help increase Pennsylvanians' understanding about our environment so that they can become better stewards of our natural resources."

In order to achieve this goal, the PCEE will hold regional meetings throughout Pennsylvania beginning in March to hear from formal and non-formal educators, environmental professionals, business and community leaders, and the general public.

There will be two meetings at each location: the first from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., and the second from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

- Dauphin County: March 6, Wildwood Lake Sanctuary, Harrisburg;
- Philadelphia: March 13, Schuylkill Center for Environmental Education;
- Lackawanna County: March 19, Radisson Lackawanna Station, Scranton;
- Centre County: March 20, Institute for Science and Technology, Pleasant Gap (The afternoon meeting will be 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.);
- Pittsburgh: April 2, Beechwood Farms Nature Reserve; and
- Crawford County: April 3, Pelletier Library, Meadville.

PCEE is a cooperative agreement among 11 partners, including DEP, formed in 1996 to ensure that citizens in the Commonwealth have access to quality environmental education.

For more information on the public sessions or a copy of the Environmental Readiness for the 21st Century report, visit the Pennsylvania Center for Environmental Education's website at www.pcee.state.pa.us (Under the "Explore" category, click "EE Research").

MADMC 2002 Can Point You In The Right Direction

YORK (York Co.) — The theme of the 2002 Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference and Trade Show (MADMC) challenges you to look at your business and decide the direction you want to take. From preconference workshops and seminars to farm tours to educational sessions to the trade show, MADMC can help you map out your future.

Head for the Holidome in York Feb. 20-23. The event will provide expert advice and information for agricultural direct sale businesses, including pick-your-own produce operations, roadside stands, CSAs, and farmers' markets.

Four Preconference Workshops/Seminars

Rob Ferber, Philly Chile Farm, is leading a workshop on community supported agriculture (CSAs). Brown's Orchards and Farm Market representatives are presenting a workshop on fruit baskets.

In addition, Richard J. George, Ph.D., professor of food marketing at Saint Joseph's University, will conduct a "Consumer Solutions" seminar. George has spent his entire professional career in the development of people. George worked in marketing research and marketing management for Scott Paper Company. He has written six books on a variety of topics and had been recognized with several awards for teaching excellence, including the internationally recognized Lindback Award for Excellence in College Teaching.

As an entrepreneur, he has learned the need to "walk the walk" and not simply "talk the talk." He has lived and taught in England and Ireland. He recently wrote a consumer-buying guide, "Customer Power: Seven Steps To Get What You Want (and Deserve)." It is available as a free download from his Website at www.rjgeorge.com.

He has spoken on the topic of marketing strategy, customer delight, marketing trends, servant leadership, and business ethics in the Americas, eastern and western Europe, and the Pacific Rim. Articles on these topics have appeared in the Journal of Consumer Marketing, the Journal of Food Products Marketing, Marketing News, and the Journal of Business Ethics.

York is known as the "factory tour capital of the world," and a full-day York County Factory Tour has been arranged for those interested. The day will end with an evening roundtable discussion on hot topics in farm retailing.

Preconference Farm Market Tours

• Barton's Farm Market (Stewartstown) — Known for its huge fieldstone fireplace, Barton's Farm Market offers fancy fruits and vegetables, baskets, crafts, fresh-baked goods, and a selection of lawn and deck furniture. A friendly atmosphere, playground, and picnic area surrounds this market.

• Brown's Orchards and Farm Market (Loganville) — The Brown family and staff invite you to visit Brown's Orchards and Farm Market located on a breathtaking hilltop in Loganville. A place that began as one family's dream has grown from a small, open-air roadside stand and 38 acres purchased in 1948 to a 30,000-square-foot, full-service farm market with 180 acres today. Brown's is a feast of delights that include homegrown fruit, local produce, a famous bakery, gift baskets, a fresh deli, fudge and candy, seasonal festivals and a distinctive gift shop.

• Perrydell Farm (York) — This bottling plant, started by George and Roger Perry in 1963, is now owned and operated by George's sons, Greg, Tom, and Chip. They produce whole milk, low fat milk, skim milk, chocolate milk, and a line of drinks. Along with the wonderful help of their wives, the future expansion of the farm market will most likely focus on dipping ice cream. The greatest joy is derived from being able to work so well together.

• Sonnewald Natural Foods (Spring Grove) — Sonnewald Natural Foods is located on a 60-acre farm eight miles southwest of York. Perhaps the oldest existing organic farm and natural food store in Pennsylvania, Sonnewald has been providing organic food, education, and nutritional support since 1955. They began by grinding grain for their neighbors, and gradually grew to the present 8,000-square-foot building. Their goal is to inspire, encourage and educate customers to greater levels of health and awareness.

• Whitecomb's Farm Market and Greenhouses — Whitecomb's Farm Market and Greenhouses opened in 1997. They believe they offer their customers a unique shopping experience in a relaxed atmosphere. They strive for quality and service and constantly listen to their customers on their wants and needs. They feel that because they are so diversified, they will continue to grow in the years ahead.

• Twin Pine Farm Country Store (Seven Valleys) — The Ilyes family farms 700 acres and operates a year-round 6,000-square-foot market. In addition to beef and produce, there is a full bakery, food bar, dairy, decorations, cheeses, and the "one-and-only" honey sweet baloney. Twin Pine Farm is dedicated to supplying quality products in the York/New Salem community.

• Central Market (York) — With a history dating from 1888, Central Market has been one of downtown York's favorite destinations. This farmers' market is where Yorkers gather to socialize and shop for homegrown produce, baked goods, flowers, handmade crafts, and Pennsylvania Dutch specialties. The Romanesque Revival market house operates three days per week.

Thursday evening is the opening reception, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Retail Farm Market Association (PaFarm). Sam Hayes will be welcoming MADMC 2002 participants, and there will be food and light entertainment.

Educational Sessions

More than 50 educational sessions on direct-to-consumer marketing will be offered. Cappy Tosetti, imagination director of Bumper Crop Marketing in Gleneden Beach, Ore. is presenting "Marketing on a Shoestring," "How to Stand Out in Your Field Without Getting Your Feet Muddy," and "Direct Marketing, It's Your Move." Linda Chapman, Harvest Moon Farm in Spencer, Ind. has presented at the annual National Specialty Cut Flower Growers Conference and will be delivering a talk on "Value-added, Bedding Plants, Wreaths and Crafts" and "Placement and Eye Appeal."

Local retail marketers that are sharing their experiences include Bill Dietrich, Joe Strite, Stewart Ramsey, Stan Dabkowski, John Trax, Lolly Lesher, Tom Becker, Steve Bogash, Rick Goss, Stan Brown, Sharon Strite. Dan Haas and Sally Kolb.

Corn, Soybean Conference In February

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — This year's Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference is scheduled Feb. 5 here at the Holiday Inn.

The conference this year will focus on key issues relating to improving prices, reducing production costs and managing risks for producers.

Boyd Smith from the National Corn Growers Association Ethanol Marketing Committee will share the national view on ethanol policy and developing markets. This should be particularly interesting, given the recent interest in ethanol production in the region.

Dennis Phelps from the United Soybean Board will address similar issues with biodiesel and emerging international markets for soybeans. Noted Ohio crop consultant Ed Winkle and Penn State's John Yocum will share their thoughts on increasing production efficiency for corn and soybeans.

Winkle has been a proponent of the Nu-Till system for planting corn no-till. Participants will also learn how economic development efforts are being considered for the creation of added-value opportunities from Russ Montgomery from the York County Economic Development Corporation.

Dr. Jim Dunn from Penn State and Gene Gantz will discuss how understanding basis and crop insurance opportunities can affect grain marketing programs and risks that producers face. Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Joel Rotz will provide an update on the Farm Bill situation for producers.

The program is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association, the Pennsylvania Soybean Board, and Penn State Extension. Contact your local extension office for registration information or call (814) 865-2543 for a brochure.

Pennsylvania Hog, Pig Numbers 3 Percent Higher

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — There were 1,060,000 hogs and pigs on Pennsylvania farms on Dec. 1, 2001, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS). This estimated inventory was up 3 percent from the previous year's inventory.

Market hog inventory, at 930,000 head, was up 2 percent.

The September-November 2001 pig crop totaled 484,000 head, up 9 percent from the same period a year earlier.

There were 55,000 sows farrowed during the quarter, up 4,000 head from the previous year. The average litter rate was 8.80 pigs per litter, up 1 percent from the previous year.

Pennsylvania hog farmers intend to have 55,000 sows farrow during the December 2001-February 2002 period, 4,000 head above actual farrowings a year ago. Farrowing intentions for the March-May 2002 quarter are projected at 56,000 sows, up 4,000 from the same period last year.

There were 2,900 hog farmers in the Keystone State during 2001, down 100 from a year ago. Of these operations, 2,000 were 1-99 head, 400 were 100-499 head, 200 were 500-999 head, 110 were 1,000-1,999 head, 155 were 2,000-4,999 head, and 35 were 5,000+ head.

Veteran Lancaster Farming Reader Wins Ice Cream Freezer

EAST BERLIN (York Co.) — Sherman Grove has been subscribing to Lancaster Farming since 1966.

This loyal reader from York County received a bonus from the paper last week when his name was selected as winner of a handcrank White Mountain ice cream freezer.

Grove had dropped his name into Lancaster Farming's ice cream freezer drawing boxes at both the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg and the Keystone Farm Show in York. It was the Keystone entry that paid off for him.

Although his favorite Lancaster Farming department is the mailbox markets, his perusal of the newspaper doesn't stop there.

"I look at all of it." the native said.

As a former swine and beef producer, Grove said he used to run several ads a year in mailbox markets.

Now that he is no longer farming, that rate has slowed but he still looks forward to the paper every week.

USDA To Offer CRP Contract Extensions

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA has announced that Conservation Reserve Program contracts expiring this year may be extended for another year. Participants with contracts expiring on Sept. 30, 2002 have from Jan. 14 to May 31 to apply for the one-year extension. Some 30,000 contracts are affected.

"The expiration affects 1.8 million rural acres now protected by the CRP. This action will help ensure the continued safeguarding of this sensitive land as a new farm bill is developed," said Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman.

Local offices of USDA's Farm Service Agency are currently notifying eligible CRP participants of their option to modify and extend their CRP contracts. The deadline to apply for an extension is May 31.

The extension option applies to CRP participants with contracts scheduled to expire on Sept. 30, 2002. The original contract with extension must not exceed 15 years.

The extension will not change participants' rental rates. All or a portion of the acreage under contract may be included in an extension, but no new acreage may be added. Obligations and responsibilities under the original contract continue to apply to contracts that are modified and extended.

USDA is not planning to offer a general CRP sign-up in fiscal year 2002. However, producers may continue to enroll relatively small, highly desirable acreage, such as filter strips and riparian buffers, in the continuous CRP at any time at their local FSA office.

Producers enrolled in CRP receive rental payments and other financial incentives to remove lands from agricultural production for a period of 10 to 15 years. CRP participants plant native grasses, trees, and other vegetation to improve water quality, soil, and wildlife habitat. About 34 million acres are currently enrolled in CRP.

For more information on the CRP program, contact your local FSA office or visit the FSA Website at: http://www.fsa.usda.gov/dafp/cepd/crp.htm.

Swenson Urges Swift Action On Farm Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson, in speeches to the Utah Farmers Union and Kansas Farmers Union state conventions this weekend, issued a passionate call for Congress to act swiftly to pass a new farm bill that provides an adequate safety net in order to avert further economic strife in rural America.

"Congress must act immediately upon reconvening Jan. 23 to pass a farm bill with a significantly improved safety net," Swenson said. "The passage of the farm bill is equal in priority to the consideration and passage of any other type of economic stimulus package."

USDA's Economic Research Service (ERS) issued a report Jan. 7 in which the 2002 net farm income forecast was revised from the $49.3 billion forecast in 2001 to $40.6 billion, a decrease of $8.7 billion.

"The recent net farm income forecast spells continued economic disaster for rural America without changes in existing farm programs or emergency supplemental assistance," Swenson said. "Farmers must have a safety net that relates to what they are producing today and the yields they are getting today, not based on yields of 15 to 20 years ago."

The USDA-ERS report also forecasts a decrease in off-farm income and an increase in debt, although the debt increase is expected to be offset by a rise in farmland values. The report also predicts that agriculture's contribution to the national economy, through added net value, will be 10 percent lower than in 2001 and the lowest since 1995.

"The economic devastation facing rural America extends well beyond the individual family farmers and ranchers operations," Swenson stated. "The increase in bankruptcies and declining rural populations results in the deterioration of the whole rural infrastructure. Its impact will be the continued loss of rural businesses, increased consolidations of schools, loss of health care services and facilities and the loss of rural transportation services. The ultimate results will be greater concentration and a contract production agriculture system."

WILL A ROBOT BE MILKING YOUR COWS?
Vinton Smith
Dairy Agent

Robotic milking technology is used in Pennsylvania!

Three dairy farms are using at least one robotic milker on their farm. They are on the front edge of innovation as they implement this technology in milking cows. However, there are dozens of other dairy producers throughout Pennsylvania watching them waiting to decide if they too will invest in this technology.

Economics, milk quality, and regulations are three of the biggest concerns that Pennsylvania dairy businesses have at this time regarding robotic milking technology. Many are looking at the capital investment costs and thinking that this is just too expensive. Some are saying, "We will not sacrifice milk quality in order to use robots." Others are concerned about how the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will regulate this technology that is only being approved on a case-by-case basis at this time. I will address all three of these issues in this column to help you better understand this technology.

• Economics: This is one of the biggest questions, "Can I afford to buy a robotic milker to milk my cows?" The answer to the question will be unique to each and every one of you. You will need to take into consideration your current investment in facilities, your need to invest in new facilities, your current and expected future labor costs, your level of production, and other "noneconomic" factors. These are all very important in determining if you can afford to invest in this technology.

Evaluating your current facilities will lead to much of the input into the your decision making process. Do you have outdated facilities that will need to be replaced or are in need of major repairs? If your current facilities are "well-used," have paid for themselves, and you are considering replacing them, then it makes economic sense to evaluate all alternatives. On the other hand, if you built a new milking parlor just a few years ago, it makes more sense to continue using that parlor until it has at least paid for itself. Challenges related to finding and maintaining a quality workforce are often key issues that encourage dairy producers to consider investing in robotic milking technology.

Clearly, a dairy producer using a robotic milker will be able to reduce the number of employees he or she hires. In addition, investing in robotic milking technology can enable a dairy producer to expand his or her herd without adding new employees. Ultimately, this will increase the cows per worker on the farm leading to improved labor efficiency. However, you must closely evaluate your savings in labor costs and compare it to your projected increase in capital cost with a robotic milker.

Your level of milk production and your efficiency of producing milk is a key fact that makes a major difference in the economic viability of any investment in new technology, including robotic milkers. Given similar input costs, the farms with higher levels of milk production will be more profitable. The cost of a new parlor or a robotic milker can be spread out over more hundredweights of milk, making the investment more economical. Regardless of your future investment decisions, be sure to be realistic about your future production levels.

Noneconomic factors such as "quality of life" have been a big part of the decision-making process to Canadian and European dairy producers who have invested in robotic milking technology. The technology has given them more flexibility in their work routine. However, it has not reduced their need to work in the barn and around the cows. A robot will only milk the cows; it can't do everything.

• Milk quality: Producing high quality milk will lead to a more profitable dairy business. Quality premiums can be as much as $.50 per CWT. That can add up to a substantial amount of money over an entire year. Regardless of the type of milking technology being used, focusing on detail and paying attention to the little things will often lead to improved milk quality.

Generally speaking, dairy farms that have switched to using robotic milking technology have not had problems producing milk that is safe and within the legal limits of quality. However, many farms have lost a little in terms of their level of milk quality. If you are thinking about investing in robotic milking technology, don't expect to improve the quality of milk that you are producing now just by switching to robots. Perhaps, over time and with a focus on detail, you will see an improvement.

• Regulation: Officials in the Bureau of Food Safety, part of the Department of Agriculture (PDA), have been very proactive and supportive of robotic milking technology. They are working closely with the current robotic milker installations to monitor milk quality and to learn as much as they can about this technology. I believe they realize that robotic milking is here to stay and they don't want to limit progress of the Pennsylvania dairy industry.

PDA is approving robotic milking installations on a case-by-case basis. They are closely evaluating every aspect of the installation to assure that the equipment at least meets the standard requirements the state has imposed on all milking systems. Officials in PDA have worked closely and proactively with the dairy producers using robotic milkers before the milkers were even installed to limit problems and concerns in the future.

• Visit a farm with a robot milker: The Capitol Region Dairy Team has organized a program at H. E. Heindel & Sons farm in Brogue (York County) called "Robotic Milking in Pennsylvania." It will be conducted Jan. 31, 2002 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. This farm has had four robotic milkers installed since last summer. The farm's dairy manager. officials from PDA, capitol region extension agents, faculty from Penn State, and representatives from Lely will be on hand to present information and to discuss questions you may have. Cost for the program is only $15 and includes lunch. To register, please call (717) 840-7408 or e-mail vsmith@psu.edu.

Robotic Milking Meeting To Take Place At York County Farm

BROGUE (York Co.) — Pennsylvania now has three farms using robotic milkers. Many other people are watching these three dairy farms as they also consider investing in this new technology. Seeing a robotic milker in operation and having a discussion with key people that were involved in the decision making process can be very helpful to gain a better understanding of this technology.

The Capital Region Dairy Team has coordinated an informational farm meeting about robotic milking. It will take place at the H. E. Heindel & Sons Farm in York County, on Jan. 31 from 9:30 a.m to 3 p.m. The Heindel's have been using four Lely Astronaut robotic milkers since last summer. You will see their robotic milkers and have an opportunity to learn first-hand about this new technology.

Dr. Jeff Hyde, professor of agricultural economic at Penn State, will present information about the economics of robotic milking. He will illustrate a new economic model that dairymen can use to determine whether this technology would be a sound economical decision for their individual farms.

Jim Dell, chief of the Division of Milk Sanitation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will discuss regulatory issues related to installing and using robotic milkers and concerns about maintaining milk quality. He will share PDA's perspective on this advanced technology for dairy producers in Pennsylvania.

Dan McFarland, regional agricultural engineering extension agent will present information about facility design. He will focus on issues that impact or change normal dairy herd management practices when a dairy producer begins to use a robotic milker.

Alfred Kamps with Lely USA, Inc. and Darlene Wiggens, dairy manager at the Heindel Farm will discuss the installation and operation of the four units at the Heindel Farm. Kamps will also present ideas about barn lay out and design in both new and existing facilities.

The program will begin in the morning at the Brown Cow County Market (the Heindel Family retail market) located on Route 74 in Brogue. Information will be presented and a panel discussion will be held in the morning. Following lunch, the program will move to the families new dairy facilities with the robotic milkers. Speakers will then lead more discussion about the installation, operation, and management of robotic milkers.

You will have the opportunity to observe robotic milkers in operation and see first hand the challenges and successes that the Heindel Farm is having with this technology. Cost of the program is $15 and includes lunch. For more information about this program or to register, call Customer Service at Penn State Cooperative Extension in York County at (717) 840-7408 or email Vinton Smith at ysmith@psu.edu by Jan. 25.

Foraging Around, the official publication of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, scheduled February 9 in Lancaster Farming, is scheduled to include a feature on rotational grazing for poultry in addition to work by other leading graziers. A preview and schedule of the upcoming Pennsylvania Forage and Grazing Conference is also scheduled, in addition to news and views of the Council.

Video/Web Drought Conference Jan. 28

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Jan. 28 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. there will be a statewide video/web Drought Conference to bring together local officials, agricultural and industry representatives, citizens and water suppliers to discuss current drought conditions and what would happen under Pennsylvania's new drought regulations if the state moves into a drought emergency.

Sixty-two of Pennsylvania's 67 counties are now under a drought watch or warning — 31 counties under a warning and 31 counties under a watch. As drought conditions continue to worsen, this is an important time for water users to begin thinking about the steps they will need to take if a drought emergency is declared.

The agenda for the Drought Conference will include presentations on the latest drought status information, a briefing on the drought regulations and related topics, and an opportunity to ask questions. The conference will be available in the auditorium of the Rachel Carson State Office Building in Harrisburg and in conference rooms in each of DEP's six regional offices as well as on the Internet through www.GreenWorks.tv; http://www.GreenWorks.tv for those who cannot attend one of DEP's offices.

Pa. Angus Association Meets During Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 86th annual Pennsylvania State Farm Show began for Angus enthusiasts with the annual banquet. Approximately 90 Angus members and guests enjoyed a very snowy evening complete with the best of a roast beef meal.

Miss American Angus, Courtny Hill-Dukehart, attended the evening events. She helped to crown the new Pa. Angus Queen Jamie Hower, Bethlehem.

Others in the court include sweethearts for 2002, Katrina Frey, Quarryville; Kim Long, Airville; and Amanda Thompson, Wellsville.

Princesses will be Eliza Walton, Kennett Square; Hope Long, Airville; and Samantha Semrau, Millerstown.

Bill Powell presented Brett Bishard, York, with his Bronze and Silver Angus Awards. Outstanding Boy and Girl Awards were presented to Kurt Long and Hope Long both of Airville.

The Family of the Year Award was presented to Rains Angus, Mercer. The Breeder of the Year Award was presented to Weaverland Valley Farms, New Holland.

Preferred pages for the upcoming directory were auctioned off and three bags of peanuts were auctioned off to benefit the Greg Krueger Family. The Junior Angus Association will be giving $1,000 to the Krueger Memorial Scholarship Fund.

The election of officers was also conducted. The president is now Harry Bachman, Annville; vice-president, Dale Rains, Mercer; secretary, Barb Weaver, New Holland; and treasurer, Brad Bishard, York. Four directors were elected for three-year terms. They are John Hausner, Dover; Ned Hower, Bethlehem; Fritz Frey, Quarryville; Cheryl Fairbairn, Coatesville.

Feeding Grain To Rainbow Trout

ABERDEEN, Idaho — Rainbow trout that flourish on grain-rich feed could be a plus for the environment and fish farmers alike. Fish geneticist Kenneth E. Overturf has pinpointed families of captive rainbow trout that thrive on grain.

Overturf is with the Agricultural Research Service's Small Grains and Potato Germplasm Research Unit at Aberdeen, Idaho, but is based at the University of Idaho's Hagerman Fish Culture Station in Hagerman. ARS is the chief scientific research agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Today's fish feeds, the fish farmer's biggest expense, are made with fishmeal from saltwater species such as anchovy, menhaden, jack mackerel or herring. Using more grain in fish feed would help prevent overfishing of these saltwater species.

Also, captive fish that gain weight when fed grain specially bred by ARS research geneticist Victor Raboy, based in Aberdeen, may help sidestep phosphorous pollution of ponds, lakes, streams and rivers. Phosphorous pollution has been blamed for algal blooms that steal the oxygen needed by fish, insects and other aquatic dwellers.

Raboy has developed barley and other grains that contain less phytate, a form of phosphorous that is difficult for fish to digest. That means these fish excrete less phosphorous in their manure. Trout fed the special grains could also save fish farmers money, because grain is currently less expensive than fishmeal.

In all, Overturf has monitored growth of about 14,000 trout in tanks at the Hagerman station. He found that a significant percentage prospered on the grain-enriched feed. Some grew to a hefty 250 grams in as little as five months, making them equal in size to the biggest of their fishmeal-fed counterparts. Overturf and ARS technician Dan Bullock are now looking at trout DNA for a reliable indicator of the ability to gain weight and stay healthy on grain-based feed.

Personnel Changes Occur At State DEP

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — DEP Secretary David E. Hess this week announced the appointment of Eric R. Conrad of Enola, Cumberland County, as Acting Deputy Secretary for Field Operations.

"Eric has more than 22 years of experience with the department, making him a natural choice to be Acting Deputy," Secretary Hess said. "While serving at the executive level in DEP's Field Operations Deputate, Eric played a key role in the development of several important programs, including the department's West Nile Virus Surveillance and Control Program and the Commonwealth's Geographic Information System-based West Nile Virus disease tracking system."

Conrad will oversee the Office of Field Operations, which is responsible for the operation of the department's six regional offices. These offices are responsible for implementing the Commonwealth's environmental-protection programs including air, water, oil and gas, radiation protection, waste, and emergency response.

Office activities include: evaluating the daily operations of DEP's environmental programs; managing the West Nile Virus Mosquito Surveillance and Black Fly control programs; and working closely with elected officials, federal and state agencies, local environmental groups, citizen activists , agriculture interests, and watershed associations.

Conrad, a registered geologist, has served as director of regional coordination and program evaluation in DEP's Office of Field Operations since September, where he provided support to the deputy secretary. He previously served as special assistant to the deputy secretary for Field Operations, and as executive assistant to the deputy secretary in DEP's Office of Mineral Resources Management.

Conrad received a master's degree in regional and urban planning from The Pennsylvania State University and a bachelor's of arts degree in geology from New England College, Henniker, N.H. Conrad lives in Enola with his wife, Vonnie.

In other personnel news, Hess also announced that DEP Deputy Secretary of Air, Recycling and Radiation Protection Denise Chamberlain will be leaving the department later this month.

"During Denise's tenure the programs in her deputate had significant accomplishments including multi-state coordination of waste disposal policy and enforcement, encouraging brownfields redevelopment through the PaSiteFinder.com Website and concluding multi-site cleanup agreements with the Department of Defense and BP and assuring continued professional management of our radiation protection programs," Hess said.

Chamberlain was appointed deputy by former Gov. Tom Ridge in August 1997. Previously, she served as vice president and associate counsel for Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh, where she was involved in environmental, corporate lending and bankruptcy work.

Hess also announced that Robert Barkanic, deputy secretary for Pollution Prevention and Compliance Assistance, has been appointed acting deputy for Air, Recycling and Radiation Protection.

Bureau of Air Quality Director James Salvaggio announced this week that he will retire Jan. 25 after more than 35 years of service to the Commonwealth.

In a letter to fellow employees, Salvaggio said, "You have been a pleasure to work with and our combined efforts have been beyond the sum of our individual accomplishments. We have significantly improved air quality in Pennsylvania. Ozone, carbon monoxide, particulate, toxic and other pollutant concentrations have been reduced throughout the state. Today millions of Pennsylvanians breathe clean, healthy air because of your work. Thousands of individuals with respiratory disease have the benefit of your efforts. You are to be congratulated for your accomplishments."

Beef Industry Brand Mark Approved For New Products

DENVER, Colo. — Eight new convenient beef products have been recognized with the beef industry's checkoff-funded Mark of Quality. The Mark of Quality signifies that these products deliver what consumers expect from beef: taste, quality and satisfaction.

The Mark of Quality is an integral part of the beef industry's Brand-Like Initiative, which is managed for the Cattlemen's Beef Board (CBB) by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA). It is designed to highlight the industry's focus on consumer needs and wants. Fifty-seven convenient retail beef products have been approved to use the Mark of Quality since the effort began in 1997.

"Manufacturers who want to display the beef Mark of Quality on their products face rigorous qualifications," said Texas beef producer James Herring, chairman of the joint industry Brand-Like Commission.

"The commission sets out rigid requirements for product packaging and presentation, including nutritional values listed on the label, instructions for cooking preparation and other guidelines," Herring said. "Then the product has to go through NCBA's Culinary Center in Chicago, as well as a final test by volunteers from the cattle industry who make up the Brand-Like Commission."

Approved products are licensed to use the Mark of Quality symbol for one year on packaging and promotional materials. Products must be resubmitted for testing if any element in product formulation or packaging changes during the license period.

Herring said the Mark of Quality helps tell consumers that a beef product has been extensively analyzed to ensure its quality. The nine-member Brand-Like Commission, consisting of U.S. beef producers and industry leaders, meets quarterly to review branded beef products for potential use of the Mark of Quality.

Greenhouse management and care will be the focus of Grower & Marketer, scheduled in the January 26 issue of Lancaster Farming. But this Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention preview issue, with maps and schedules, also is scheduled to include a feature on mum growing and other items of interest to the eastern vegetable, fruit, nursery, and direct marketing industries.

Dairy Risk Management Training Set

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Milk prices have fallen significantly in recent weeks because of a weak national economy and events surrounding Sept. 11.

Dairy farmers who used the futures markets prior to September were able to protect their milk checks against these drops. Using the futures markets to protect "part" of your milk check is surprisingly easy once you know the basics. Many dairy farmers have opportunities to forward contract/hedge milk either through their cooperatives or through a broker. The problem is, many don't understand the basics.

The purpose training meetings: 1) help dairy farmers understand their milk checks and the market where they sell their milk, 2) learn to lock in good milk prices, and 3) incorporate risk management into their business plans. This training will be very basic — don't worry if you aren't a math genius! This introduction will also help farmers that want to attend USDA's Dairy Options Pilot Program later in the year.

All worksheets and materials will be provided. The basis of the training will be a new Penn State manual on dairy risk management. This manual is available online at http://pubs.cas.psu.edu/freepubs/ua359.html.

Ken Bailey and Sarah Roth, Penn State, will train. Bailey is an associate professor of dairy markets and policy at Penn State. Roth is an extension associate with the Dairy Alliance Program.

The program will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end before 4 p.m. There will be a registration of $10 per person to cover the cost of the meal. Training will be limited to 15-20 farmers. Dairy farmers are encouraged to bring their monthly milk checks (for 2001), a calculator, and a pen or pencil.

Woodland Owner's Association Organizes

WELLSBORO (Tioga Co.) — The Tioga County Woodland Owner's Association is being formed and will conduct its first meeting Thursday, Feb. 7 at 7 p.m. at The Pennsylvania College of Technology North Campus.

Regional Extension Forester Dr. Robert Hansen will present "Habitat, Cutting, and Landowner Objectives."

There will also be a short presentation about the new Woodland Owner's Association.

This is an opportunity for forest landowners to learn about the first steps in caring for their woodlands. Anyone interested in caring for our forests is invited, whether you own a woodlot or not.

The Tioga County Woodland Owner's Association offers woodland owners the opportunity to learn about their woodlands together and from each other. It offers a forum for woodland owners to discuss common concerns and, hopefully, to come to solutions of challenges that face woodland owners.

The association will conduct numerous educational meetings and woodland tours on a regular basis. Summer picnics are opportunities for woodland owners to get to know one another and discuss their concerns about woodlot management. The TCWOA will also sponsor other educational events (such as the upcoming Woodland Owner's Conference). Take this opportunity to learn about the new association for woodland owners.

For more information about the association, call the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in Tioga County at (570) 724-9120 or the Bradford County office at (570) 265-2896.

Adams Co. Honors Farmland Preservationist

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Adams County is one of six Pennsylvania counties to reach their goal of preserving more than 10,000 acres of farmland.

At a recent gathering of the Adams County Agricultural Land Preservation Board, President Tim Brown presented former board member Bill Oyler with a plaque thanking him for his 10 years of service to the board. During those 10 years, 10,000 acres of farmland were preserved under the state and county program.

"Bill was one of the original board members who were responsible for the incredible task of putting this program together" said Ellen Dayhoff, director. "I have been blessed with an extremely dedicated and supportive board from the beginning. Each board member brings their individual expertise to the board, and Bill's knowledge and dedication to our fruit industry helped us push for changes to our ranking system that have proven to better our program.".

An Adams County celebration for achieving the 10,000 acre milestone is set for this spring.

Bill Oyler, left, receives a plaque from Tim Brown honoring his contributions to farmland preservation in Adams County.

Ag Sustainability

Edward Herrmann
Extension Agent
Agricultural Sustainability
Lebanon County

HOW IMPORTANT IS SUSTAINABLE AGRICULTURAL?

In weekly "Feedstuffs" publication, the Aug. 6 issue described the decline of poultry production in the state of Connecticut.

It so happens that the Nutmeg state originally was an important leader in poultry production, dating back to Yankee Clipper ships of the early 1900s.

The broiler chicken industry in the U.S. started in this region when Alexander Hamilton directed the Clipper ships to bring back farm animals from Europe and Asia to expand the genetic diversity and quality of livestock and poultry. Early New England farmers would greet the clipper ships to purchase the new arrivals.

Breeds such as "Rhode Island Reds" were developed just a few miles from the clipper ship docks.

By the late 19th Century, the poultry industry of New England was very viable as it included layer/breeder flocks, small farms, and feed mills. In 1986 in Eastern Connecticut, the University of Connecticut started research, teaching, extension and education in poultry science and husbandry. This institution is credited as the first poultry program in the land-grant university system.

The poultry industry flourished in the New England area on many specialized farms, and included small family farms in this region. The genetic foundations of many meat birds were bred and developed in this region as well. The development of poultry vaccines for major poultry diseases and improved feeding and nutrition of poultry was pioneered by the poultrymen of Connecticut.

As of this past Aug. 14, the last poultry farm in Connecticut was depopulated and left empty, with only the poultry houses left as a reminder of the once robust and historic agriculture heritage. Progress, integration, and migration of the poultry industry to the southern states are the reasons for the extinction of this once vital industry.

Do you think that this will ever happen in Pennsylvania?

This is hard to predict. However, the importance of sustainability through direct marketing and consumer education about regional food supplies cannot be overemphasized.

Sustainability is the responsibility of every farmer or grower in the sustainable food system. Healthy environments, clean water, and crop diversity are important to everyone's future. Consumers must support local agriculture to preserve the picturesque farmland they love to gaze upon. Farmers must devote promotional time between marketing and food production. Eventually, the Pennsylvania community can contribute to healthy food systems that will preserve farms and farmland by supporting local agriculture.

Farmland preservation efforts by government and nonprofit foundations are contributing to protecting agriculture land. However, this effort, critics argue, will only preserve open space, and does not guarantee that someone will manage or be the husbandman of that land. People are required to manage and farm the land. We need to encourage new and beginning farmer programs in agriculture education at the high school and university levels. Agriculture issues and marketing need to be incorporated into both education systems.

Hands-on experience and practical instruction time should be integrated into the current system. Internships can be promoted and offered rewardingly as part of the education process. Other education areas needed should be incorporated into agriculture education are developing food processing and production of value added products.

What will agriculture look like?

In the next 20 to 50 years, do you want to read about the great agriculture heritage of Pennsylvania as a historical producer of food that made important advances to farming and livestock practices? Or would you prefer to see opportunity and sustainability generate the precedent for others to model and emulate?

Many people thought it would never happen in Connecticut. Many local consumers think it will never happen in Pennsylvania.

In some local farming communities where cheap, overabundant food and large numbers of livestock exist, the opinion of local residents deny or ignore the fateful reality that steam rolled through New England during the previous three decades.

In many local communities throughout central Pennsylvania, residents think this is impossible and "that it could never happen in their backyard." But how much longer can farmers continue to produce food at or above the cost of production? The federal government subsidizes agriculture at more than 40 percent of the total dollars returning to the farm. Farmers continually complain about the government's involvement in agriculture. However, without the government payments, many farms would go broke. The margin for profitability is very thin, and several farms are often one disaster from bankruptcy.

Many agriculture economists believe that we will have two classes of farms left in the next 10 years — the very large, and the very small.

Large farms will continue to grow larger in size as they are formed by alliances or by farms that are bailed out of bankruptcy. The production and marketing systems will retain commodity market orientation. It is hopeful that wholesale prices will remain even or above the cost of production.

Integrated food company farms are growing very rapidly in many regions of the U.S. Farmers are producing animals, milk, eggs, and crops under contract arrangements with several companies. This production system is good for companies, but serves as a risk management tool for large farms.

The small farms and part-time farms will continue to grow as many farmers work in jobs off the farm. The small farm has the potential to be a very profitable enterprise in the sustainable farming system. Community supported agriculture that builds relationships between consumers and a farmer develops trust in this food system.

Preserving a food system that is closer to home, and a system that preserves and protects local agriculture, inspires consumers and farmers alike. This system can function without government support payments. Many regions in Pennsylvania have begun "partnerships" that make their communities sustainable.

Technology is a valuable marketing tool for this size or production system of farms. E-commerce could make this small farming system more profitable than many large farms. Farmers will have to take advantage of education and training opportunities to capitalize in this marketing system.

What can be done to enhance the sustainable farming food system?

Agriculture changed more rapidly in the year 2000 than it did the previous 30 years. There will always be a need for larger production types of farms to feed the masses. However, local-based agriculture that is sustainable system is valuable to the community it provides food and fiber for. The need for local "connections" to the food supply is important to producers and consumers alike.

Sustainable agriculture protects the environment and serves as a mechanism to "clean the air" from urban pollution. The woodlots serve as habitat for wildlife. Local farms serve as a filter to protect valuable water resources and provide wetlands to improve the water quality of our rivers and streams. These ecosystems also filter out excess nutrients and pesticides.

Farms that have soil conservation plans in practice are saving valuable topsoil and preventing the silting of our waterways. This sustainable practice in combination with livestock farms that have nutrient management plans are helping to improve the quality of life for all people that live in both rural and urban communities.

Sustainable agriculture accomplishes three important objectives:

1. It contributes to long-term farm profitability.

2. Provides for environmental stewardship.

3. Improves the rural quality of life.

What can be done to preserve sustainable farms?

There are several important transformations that farmers and agriculture enterprises can do in order to remain important to rural and urban communities.

Farmers can learn more about implementing management practices that will help them become more profitable:

- Develop a business plan.
- Be familiar with risk management tools.
- Manage your finances.
- Incorporate technology wherever it is practical.
- Learn to market your crops, livestock, and farm-produced products.

Eliminate the phrase "get rid of" from your marketing language.

- Form alliances, networks, or merge your farming efforts with other local farms. Utilize and organize cooperatives to decrease your input costs, or increase your bargaining power in the market place. Consider forming limited liability corporations (LLC) to become efficient and competitive in commodity markets.
- Learn and apply sustainable agriculture management practices. Realize that your nonfarming neighbors do not always understand your business. Be considerate of your neighbors when deciding to apply manure to fields. Be considerate of holidays and weekends when scheduling fieldwork or manure applications whenever practical.
- Become active and involved in your community and local government.
- Take an active role in agriculture education of children in schools, or adults in community projects.

As consumers and neighbors, several key objectives in keeping local farms in your community should be emphasized:

- Buy local foods whenever possible. Support your local farms.
- Become familiar with the seasonality of food crops you consume. Inquire about how your food is produced. Farmers love to share information about what they do.
- Develop working relationships with local farmers. Share your food preference and food safety concerns. Realize that organic agriculture production systems are not practical on every farm.
- Encourage local farms to try and add one new sustainable management practice that protects or improves the environment.
- Be reasonable and try to understand the individual challenges farmers face. Realize that milk, meat, and eggs have a management side that includes odors and dust that farmers have to cope with every day.
- Become active and involved in your community and local government.
- Participate in the education process of children in schools, or adults in community projects.

It is everyone in the sustainable food system's responsibility to ensure that it never allows farming in local communities to end.

Schweiker Administration Announces More Than $1.2 Million For Farmland Conservation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced more than $1.2 million for the state's 66 conservation districts to support conservation practices on farms.

"Our conservation districts lead grassroots-level efforts to protect our lands, and fulfill our commitment to the children who will inherit our farms and pristine lands," Hayes said. "The districts work closely with farmers, foresters and others who strive to use environmental best management practices. I commend the dedication of the State Conservation Commission, the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, and landowners who work to protect our farmland."

Hayes presented the funding to the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts (PACD) on behalf of all 66 conservation districts at a recent meeting of the 11-member State Conservation Commission (SCC). The SCC is the oversight group for the state's conservation districts. The Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts is a nonprofit conservation organization representing those districts. The funding is channeled to individual districts through the SCC.

The funding is used to support five program areas:

- Agricultural Conservation Technician Program (36 counties), $600,000, enables conservation districts to employ and train engineers and technicians to design and oversee the installation of best-management practices
- Farmland Preservation Administrative and Technical Support (38 counties), $200,000, provides funds to eligible conservation districts that provide administrative and conservation planning support to approved county farmland preservation programs
- Leadership Development (66 counties), $100,000, provides funds for the development and delivery of leadership development and capacity building tools (strategic planning, personnel management, fiscal planning and management) that are tailored specifically to the needs of conservation district directors and staff
- Ombudsman Pilot Project (Berks, Chester, and Lancaster counties), $185,000, for the development of new tools and techniques to help conservation districts facilitate the review and consideration of nutrient-management plans for livestock operations, to create a better understanding among the public of the changing nature of agricultural production methods, and to recognize agricultural producers that are meeting or exceeding state and federal conservation standards and
- District Manager Cost-Share (66 counties), $125,000, which helps to enable conservation districts to employ qualified managers.

Growing Tomatoes Using A Trellis

Geneva, N.Y.

Increasingly, more and more tomato growers are using the Florida weave, short stake, or trellis system (all names for the same technique) to grow their crops. This production system keeps plants growing upright and off the ground and most growers who have tried it are convinced the fruit quality is better (bigger fruit, less rot, easier to pick).

Researchers in New Jersey demonstrated that fruit grown this way have fewer storage rots, likely from better fungicide coverage as well as foliage and fruit that dry more quickly after rains or heavy dew. It's really a pretty simple technique once you get the hang of it. Here's some helpful suggestions.

First, use determinate or semi-determinate varieties of tomatoes. Indeterminate types can be used but require longer and thicker stakes and much greater pruning. The guidelines given here are for determinate and semi-determinate types.

Space the plants 18 to 24 inches in the row on 5- to 6-foot centers. Prune the plants so that you establish a balance between fruit and vine growth. Prune all the suckers off up to the one immediately below the first flower cluster. Try to remove them when the suckers are between 2 and 4 inches in length. Prune before the first stringing and only when the plants are dry, to avoid spreading bacterial diseases.

You may have to go back and prune a second time. Do not remove the sucker below the first flower cluster or any above the cluster. Doing so will result in severe stunting. Some varieties may do better with leaving the two suckers below the first flower cluster. Do some experimenting on your farm. Remember, it's better to leave too many suckers than to remove too many.

Once you have done the pruning, you are ready to set up the trellis. Place a stake at every other plant, spaced evenly between the two plants. Use a sturdy stake, at least one inch square, 4 to 4.5 feet long. Stakes can be reused, but make sure that you sanitize them before reusing using a Clorox wash. Drive the stake into the soil about 12 inches. For small plantings, make a stake driving tool. Get a 2-foot length of galvanized pipe, wide enough to fit around a stake. Screw on a cap onto one end. Put the pipe over a stake, lift it up, and let it fall. For larger acreage, use a power-driven stake driving tool.

The plants will need to be "strung" for the first time when they are about 8-10 inches tall. Make sure you get to them before they flop over. For stringing, use lightweight, thin, plastic twine, available in 3-4 pound boxes (30 pounds per acre are required). To make tying convenient, a homemade stringing tool can be made. The tool will work as an extension of your arm which limits the amount of bending you will need to do. Take an old broom handle or a shortened tomato stake, about 2 feet long, and drill two holes one inch from each end. The holes must be wide enough to allow the string to be fed through. Attach the box of string to your belt and thread the twine through both holes. Tie the end of the string to the first stake, about 10 inches above ground level. You are now ready to weave.

Use the stringing tool to pass string along the near side of the first tomato plant and the far side of the second. As you get to the second stake wrap the string tightly around the stake and continue down the row in the same fashion. When you reach the last stake in the row, work your way back down the row in a similar fashion. Between each stake, the twine should be in the shape of a figure eight so that each plant is held firmly in place. When you get back to where you began, tie the string on the first stake and you are done, at least for the next couple of weeks. Repeat the procedure as the plants grow, placing strings about every 10 inches. You do not need to make the figure eight around each plant for the other strings. Simply run the string down one side of the plants and up the other side when you return. That will leave you with about 4 to 5 strings and a row of very sturdy tomato plants.

Some advice, however, to get the most out of the system. Make sure the two end stakes are anchored securely. They are under the most pressure, and if they start leaning, the twine gets loose and the vines could fall over. Also, don't prune, stake, or string the plants when they are wet since that is a sure way to infect plants with bacterial diseases.

Agriculture Community Provides Assistance At Ground Zero

'Pork For New York' Program Launched

A new campaign, dubbed "Pork for New York," will feed the thousands of workers at New York City's "Ground Zero" with commodity products, especially needed pork.

The goal is to collect donations and then purchase meat to feed the relief workers.

A restaurant in New York City, Nino's, has been feeding people since September 11. Nino's, which is one of the closest restaurants to "Ground Zero," has closed its doors to the public and volunteered to feed the firefighters, police workers, the military personnel, and "anyone else who comes to help clean up — they're feeding 3,000-5,000 every day," said Reno Thomas, Beavertown, who with his brother, Park Thomas, created the initiative. Both men are retired from the hog industry.

"Nino's has been absorbing the cost of providing all of these meals, but with rescue efforts expected to continue for the unforeseeable future, they need assistance to continue to be able to feed the relief workers," he said.

The first load of pork is going to New York on Jan. 24th, according to Thomas. Inspiration began with their niece, Van Robbins, of Atlanta, Georgia. She read the book "The Prayer of Jabez" and organized a project to benefit the relief efforts. Robbins and 28 other women from the Savannah area, calling themselves the "Southern Smiles," took three tractor trailer loads of food to New York and cooked a "Low Country Boil" at Nino's Restaurant.

"They brought everything to do it all," said Thomas, "including a tent to work out of and all the cooking utensils." The meal included a ton of little red potatoes, 1,500 pounds of sausage, 1,500 pounds of shrimp, onions, corn on the cob, and seasoning, all boiled in one pot.

Their meal served approximately 3,000 of the rescue workers. In addition to cooking the meal, which is estimated to have cost around $30,000, Georgia residents gave a donation to the relief efforts of $21,000.

After she arrived in New York, Robbins called her two uncles, who sat down, made plans, and got backing from organizations, such as the Pennsylvania Livestock Association (PLA), where they are both members. Additionally Park is on the board of the PLA.

"We now have 40 members of the board of directors from all across the state helping to raise funds for this particular project. That's what we needed, a network across the state," said Thomas. As a result of contacts with other farm organizations, eggs as well as pork products will go to New York.

A brochure, newspaper advertising are working to raise money to purchase commodity products. "We're going to keep this thing running until it's (Ground Zero) cleaned up, and that may run for another six months," he said.

Both Farm Bureau members, Park and Reno Thomas live in Beavertown, Snyder County.

To make a donation to "Pork for New York," mail your donation to "Pork for New York", c/o Bev Gruber, Box 5, New Tripoli, PA 18066. Make your check payable to PLA.

Beef Industry Contributes To Relief Efforts

WESTMORELAND, NY — Sometimes the burden of a terrible job can be eased when a good meal is served. This was the hope of cattle producers across the nation when they developed a fund to provide assistance to rescue workers, clean up crews and victims of last September's terrorist attacks. In response to the tragedy, the beef industry contributed over $103,000 to relief efforts.

The beef community provided funds to purchase $63,057 in beef certificates. These certificates were distributed by the Salvation Army to families displaced by the attacks and to restaurants and organizations providing meals for rescue and clean up crews. The certificates are redeemable at grocery stores, meat lockers and restaurants nation wide for the purchase of beef products.

Additionally, 12,519 pounds of beef and veal were purchased and given to City Harvest and Bouley Bakery organizations in New York City who are feeding victims and rescue workers. Finally, $9,500 was sent to Salvation Army, $5,000 to the American Red Cross, and $5,000 to City Harvest for additional relief efforts.

Of the sum total of money raised by the Beef Industry, the largest single contribution came from Don and Adeline Hight, via the South Dakota Stock Grower's Association, who donated the profits from the sale of 100 calves, a total of $41,047.47.

Other significant donations came from the Oklahoma Beef Industry Council, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association and S-Foods via the United States Meat Export Federation, each with $10,000. The New York Beef Industry Council donated $5,000, which covered the cost of 1,810 pounds of ground veal and 1,703.45 pounds of veal sausage.

McDonald's Contributes To BSE Research

DENVER Colo. — Cattlemen have answered a challenge grant for Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE) research from the McDonald's Corp. with a $600,000 investment of their own.

The McDonald's Corp. on Dec. 13 announced that it had awarded a $500,000 challenge grant to the National Cattlemen's Foundation for BSE research.

The Foundation is an independent charitable research and education organization. It is the primary contractor with the Cattlemen's Beef Board (CBB) for checkoff-funded research conducted on its behalf by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA). The Foundation will work with the NCBA's Research and Technical Services staff on the research.

Cattlemen across the country, through their $1-per-head checkoff, pledged $600,000 to the BSE research effort. The Beef Promotion Operating Committee, an independent group consisting of ten members from the CBB and ten members from the Federation of State Beef Councils, approved the allocation during its Dec. 12-13 meeting in Las Vegas. The Operating Committee approves all beef checkoff proposals and expenditures for work conducted on behalf of the CBB.

"Food safety is everyone's business," said Ken Koziol, assistant vice president of McDonald's World-Wide Quality Assurance. "We have the world's safest food supply here in the U.S. and these grants are designed to help keep it that way. Funding the best and the brightest in our industry is not only worthwhile, it is the right thing to do on behalf of the consumer."

"While a recent report from Harvard said the United States was at low risk for a BSE outbreak, cattlemen and allied industries must move to strengthen the proven firewalls," said Foundation President Don Butler.

"This grant is important for research initiatives that continue to keep America BSE free."

The Foundation now will ask other companies and foundations to participate in research efforts into this disease, about which little is known. However, this much is known: BSE outbreaks in Europe have decimated their beef industry. Beef consumption in Japan, the top export market for U.S. beef, plunged after reports of BSE there.

In October, a committee of 25 representatives of the U.S. beef industry from producers to researchers met to continue identifying voids in BSE research and develop BSE research priorities. The BSE Working Group's five topic areas consisted of basic research, diagnostics, "Beef Quality Assurance" Best Management Practices, eradication and rendering technologies.

"Research and education these are why the Foundation exists," Butler said. "As an independent charitable group, we can pursue funding for vital projects like this that further food safety, and protect consumers and the cattle and beef industries.

"We hope other companies and allied industries contribute so we can better learn how to guard against the introduction of BSE or just wipe it out completely. This effort requires a coordinated research response and we're glad to help take the lead."

N.C. Hog/ Pig Inventory Down 3 Percent From Sept. 1

RALEIGH, N.C. — All hogs and pigs on North Carolina farms on December 1, 2001 totaled 9.5 million head, 3 percent below the September 1, 2001, inventory, but 2 percent above the level at this time last year, according to the North Carolina Agricultural Statistics Service (NCASS).

The inventory consisted of 2 percent more market hogs than last December, totaling 8.5 million head. Breeding stock, at 1 million head, was unchanged from the previous year.

North Carolina ranks second nationally in the number of hogs and pigs, behind Iowa's 15 million head. Minnesota is a distant third with 5.6 million head inventory.

The state's pig crop during the September-November 2001 period totaled 4,744,000 head, 1 percent above the same months last year. These pigs were produced by 530,000 sows, no change from last year. Pigs saved per litter averaged 8.95 compared to last year's 8.85 litter rate.

North Carolina producers intend to farrow 530,000 sows from December 2001-February 2002 and 550,000 during March-May 2002. If these intentions materialize, farrowings will be unchanged and up 2 percent, respectively, for the same periods last year.

Consumers Remain Confident That U.S. Beef Is Safe

DENVER, Colo. — Consumer confidence that U.S. beef is safe from 'mad cow disease' (Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy, BSE) rose to a record high 89 percent in December, while consumer awareness of BSE in the United States has dropped over the last six months, according to recent checkoff-funded research on behalf of the Cattlemen's Beef Board.

A previous survey found that in July 2001 nearly nine of 10 respondents had heard something about 'mad cow disease' in the previous month. In December that figure had dropped to 70 percent — but was still higher than the 58 percent awareness measured in December 2000.

Despite a higher awareness of BSE than a year ago, the number of respondents who said they were confident that U.S. beef is safe rose from 82 percent in December 2000 to the current level of 89 percent.

"The beef industry and the U.S. government have been working since the late 1980s to ensure the BSE never becomes a problem in this country," said Rick McCarty, NCBA executive director of issues management who oversees the BSE tracking survey program.

"The triple firewalls of import bans, active surveillance and the ban on feeding ruminant-derived protein supplements to ruminants have been effective in preventing BSE problems in the U.S.

A comprehensive, three-year risk analysis study by Harvard University recently confirmed the effectiveness of our prevention and risk management programs."

McCarty also pointed out that the beef industry has maintained an aggressive risk communications program about BSE since 1996. "We've been conducting these attitude tracking surveys since the spring of 1996," he said, "and consumer confidence in the safety of U.S. beef has always remained high.

This high confidence has been supported by the industry's BSE risk communications efforts. This past year, consumers heard an awful lot in the media about 'mad cow disease'," he added, "but much of what they heard were our messages about the triple firewalls and the fact that we don't have this disease in the U.S."

The independent study was conducted by the research firm IPSOS-Reid U.S. Public Affairs and coordinated for the Cattlemen's Beef Board by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA). The study used a national random sample of U.S. adults and has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Dairy Days Under Way

Agent: Don't Let Up On Biosecurity

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Producers eager to keep up on the latest information have begun attending "Dairy Days" being offered in counties throughout the region.

Sponsored by the Penn State cooperative extension, the seminars cover diverse topics such as biosecurity, nutrition, environmental issues, and cow comfort.

Extension agent Clyde Myers hosted a Berks County Dairy Day attended by about 65 producers here this week.

Myers started the day by speaking on the continued and increasing importance of biosecurity on dairy farms.

Continued vigilance for foot and mouth disease, BSE, and the possibility of bioterrorism is crucial, Myers reminded the group. A strict biosecurity program will also help avoid the threat of more common diseases.

"Dairy farmers need to have an updated biosecurity plan," he said. "It needs to be written down and not just be in the farmer's mind."

All family members and workers involved in the operation need to understand and help enforce the biosecurity plan. At a minimum, all visitors to the farm must wear thoroughly disinfected rubber boots, Myers said.

People such as salesmen who travel from farm to farm need to carry rubber boots, a scrub brush, bucket, and disinfectant along with them. Clean clothes are also important, Myers pointed out.

The terrorist attacks of September 11 have also increased concerns about bioterrorism threats.

"Farmers need to be mindful of strangers in the area," he said.

Other topics at the Dairy Day focused on forage quality, with silage fermentation, silage additives, and TMR particle size in the spotlight.

Jud Heinrichs of Penn State shared findings on the effect of particle size in dairy rations, concluding that recent trends may have "gone too far" toward larger particle sizes.

At the same time, Heinrichs warned against chopping feed too finely and advised against chopping hay in the mixer along with the rest of the ration. As the hay is being chopped, other feed particles are also getting smaller he noted.

"Chopping (hay) in the mixer leaves a whole lot of room for error," he said.

A high proportion of tiny particles in the TMR will pass out of the rumen too quickly and create excess acid, he said.

Heinrichs demonstrated a series of four screens that can be used to determine particle size distribution in TMRs.

According to Heinrichs, an incorrect older recommendation is that 10-15 percent of the TMR should consist of particle sizes greater than 1.5 inches. Recent studies point to a finer recommendation: 2-8 percent of the mix should be greater than ¾ inch. Particle size distribution in the mix should be less than previously believed.

"We want a narrow range (in particle size)" Heinrichs said.

Heinrich encouraged producers to closely monitor their rations.

"The more often you check particle size and dry matter, the more you can fine tune your ration," he said.

Carl Brown, Dave Casper, Frank Janicki, and Tim Kissling shared their views on feeding issues, as well as topics such as the problem of high culling rates, the future of dairy industry, and some key problem areas they observe on dairy operations.

Included in their concerns were insufficient moisture testing of feeds on farms, lack of feed consistency, lack of attention to transition cows, and water quality.

To find out when your local Dairy Day is scheduled, keep an eye on the Lancaster Farming calendar. Call your local extension office to learn more about dairy topics.

Nutrient Management Update At Franklin Co. Dairy Day

Feb. 28 Permit Deadline For Smaller CAFOs

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

KAUFFMAN STATION (Franklin Co.) — Nutrient management concerns and the future of Pennsylvania and federal policy were the focus of a presentation given to a gathering of dairy producers here January 4.

"(Nutrient management) is a very rapidly changing area," said Charles Abdalla, Penn State department of agricultural economics and rural sociology,

Abdalla reminded producers that operations falling in the range of 301 to 1,000 animal equivalent units (AEUs) with more than 2 AEUS per acre of land suitable for spreading manure must apply for a permit by Feb. 28 through the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

One AEU equals 1,000 pounds of live animal weight.

According to Abdalla, 187 mature cows (averaging 1,300 pounds,) 94 replacement animals, and 150 acres of land available for manure would add up to 310 AEUs and 2.1 AEUs per acre. Such an operation would be classified as a CAFO and required to apply for the permit.

CAFOs with more than 1,000 AEUs were previously required to apply for the permit by May 19 of last year.

Required by the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) through the DEP, the permit requires operators to comply with specific design and operating standards including a state-approved nutrient management plan, erosion and sediment control plan, best management practices, and self-inspection.

Abdalla also urged producers to find out in which watershed their farm is located. Some watersheds are designated as "special protection" and require a more extensive, individual permit in addition to the general permit.

"Location matters," Abdalla said.

New and/or expanded CAFOs of more than 1,000 AEUs and operations with direct discharges to surface waters must have individual permits, regardless of their watershed location.

Abdalla outlined the three principle laws governing nutrient management in Pennsylvania: the Pa. Clean Stream Law, the Pa. Nutrient Management Act of 1993, and the Federal Clean Water Act of 1972.

He also took a look into the future of nutrient management policies, on both state and federal levels.

One proposed EPA rule of interest to Pennsylvania agriculture will be the inclusion of poultry under CAFO definitions, effective in December of this year.

Federal policy is also shifting towards a more phosphorus-based nutrient management system. In October, USDA's Natural Resource and Conservation Service will begin requiring phosphorus-based nutrient management plans for operations that accept government cost-sharing funds for nutrient management, according to Abdalla.

Meanwhile, the course of Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act is under discussion, with changes in the works defining concentrated animal operations, phosphorus management, regulations on exported manure, and monitoring of nutrient management plans.

Changes in the Nutrient Management Act are scheduled to take effect in 2004.

Md. Teen Crowned Miss American Angus

When she won the contest, Cortney received a scrapbook which she will fill out and return to the national auxiliary. Angus operations across the country donate items for her position, which include bracelets, a belt buckle, watch, luggage, and wardrobe and travel allowance.

A Surprise

Her appointment to the position was a bit of a surprise to her family.

Her parents had spent the afternoon of the coronation shopping for waterers and a trailer, and arrived almost too late to hear the announcement, which happened just before the last class.

Prior to the announcement Cortney's parents were, in fact, out in a packed hallway — the arena was full of people waiting to hear the announcement. They ran out the door and around the building just in time to hear their daughter's name called as the new Miss American Angus.

Hill and Dukehart laughingly recall that they had already checked out of the hotel, packed the truck, and did not buy tickets for the banquet, as they planned on driving through the night to allow Cortney to attend classes the next day.

"We call this the power of negative thinking," said Hill.

"We kept pinching ourselves," he said. "People kept coming up and congratulating her — we were all just blown away."

Her mother is looking forward to traveling with Cortney as her chaperone.

Her father, originally from Texas, does not come from a farming background and is an auto technician. "We're just having the time of our lives with this, not having come from this," said Hill.

Her mother, from Howard County, showed horses for years and still has two as "pasture ornaments." She also led 4-H horse clubs. Although she would have enjoyed teaching Cortney about horses, Dukehart is glad that Cortney was given the chance to decide which animals to exhibit.

"When she joined 4-H that first year, we bought her chickens. We sat her down at the end of the year and she said, 'I want a pig.'" Later a sheep, then steer, then Angus animals followed, but "it has always been her decision to do it," she said.

"All we did was support her — it was always something she wanted to do," said Hill.

Shows, Conferences

Her six mandatory shows will send her to Colorado, Nevada, back to Maryland, and Wisconsin, besides a conference in California. Cortney is chair of the Eastern Regional Show.

Most recently she headed to Wooster, Ohio to the Certified Angus Beef headquarters, the first queen to attend the seminar that board members attend to acquaint them more thoroughly with the business.

She plans to attend state and county fairs and field days. She also attended the Pennsylvania Farm Show. In addition she hopes to attend a national junior show in Calgary. She has been invited to numerous state meeting and banquets.

"A lot of the neighboring states have been really supportive," she said. "It has been a long time since there has been a Miss American Angus from the East."

According to Cortney many of the Miss American Angus participants come from the Midwest.

A Platform

Cortney looks at the position as not only an honor but also a platform.

"For Cortney to be a role model for the younger girls is exciting," said Hill. "I can remember when she met her first Miss American Angus. Cortney was so excited that she remembered her name," said Dukehart.

Cortney is looking forward to working one-on-one with younger Angus sweethearts, queens, and princesses as they hand out ribbons together at shows.

"Even my appearance can set a standard — even my carriage sets an example," she said. While she is at an agricultural event representing the Angus breed, Cortney will wear the official red, black, and white colors plus a jacket, sash, and pin given to her.

The dress code changes with location, as she will wear boots and more western-looking wear when she travels to Denver.

Her Show Ring Career

Cortney has enjoyed success not only now as a representative but in her own show ring career, which was launched by 4-H participation.

In her first year of showing Angus cattle she purchased two steers, then switched to heifers, a better option, according to her mother, who became attached to the animals. The steer Freckles, for example, although not a winner in the show ring, still resides at the farm.

"Livestock judging helped me to figure out which animal to select, since I went to sales and picked them out," she said. She participated on the Maryland team that enjoyed success in the national competition in Louisville. She is also lending her expertise to 4-H'ers as a helper for the livestock judging 4-H club.

After her first heifers were purchased, "from there it just kept snowballing every year." The farm is now host to 15 head of heifers, steers, and one bull now on bull test. All of the animals are in Cortney's name. She is expecting a calf crop of five calves this spring.

Cortney will be taking three heifers and three steers to shows this year, which may prove to be a challenge as she will also be handling Miss American Angus responsibilities, such as handing out ribbons during shows.

Her Own Fitting

Cortney does all her own fitting and clipping. According to her father, at a national show she attended a several-day fitting school. "She had the technique. She knew what she was doing, she just lacked confidence," he said. "When she came back you couldn't stop her."

"I would go down to the barn and practice," she said.

"Bob was afraid he was going to get clipped," said Dukehart.

Although heifers are usually her animals of choice for the show ring, Cortney still exhibits steers and last year showed a bull. She also enjoys showing cow/calf pairs.

"We've had so much fun showing cow/calves," said Hill.

"We start fooling with them from the time they're born. They're halter broke by the time they're two weeks old," said Dukehart.

Angus Association Activities

After Cortney's first year in the cattle ring, a friend informed her that with Angus cattle she could not only exhibit cattle but also participate in other activities. After that conversation Cortney purchased an Angus and quickly became involved with the junior association.

At the junior national conference, for example, she participated in Leaders Engaged in Angus Development (LEAD) Conferences, which has opened the door for participation in the

Survey Reveals Consumers

Yet when asked about GM crops, what was the first thing that "popped into their heads," said Hallman, when they heard those terms? "One quarter of the population has no idea what you're talking about. It's a complete blank. Nothing comes to (their) mind."

Though they claim to immediately grasp the concept of GM foods, and believe they are willing to use GM foods with direct health benefits (such as Vitamin A in rice to prevent blindness), about 90 percent of the U.S. population believe the "balance of nature can easily be disrupted using GM crops." Fifty-eight percent believe "we have no business meddling with nature," noted Hallman.

Thirty-five percent believe we'd be "better if we did not do GM at all," Hallman said.

Eighty percent of the respondents agree that "humans are fallible, there could be serious consequences" using GM techniques, with mistakes "bound to happen."

Forty percent of Americans believe that "most food in the country is grown on the family farm," and that many believe farming is a "noble, wholesome," occupation. About 38 percent believe that farmers have to "adopt GM to survive."

Said Hallman, "It's more about the products of biotech than the process of biotech that will determine whether consumers will accept biotechnology products."

Ninety percent believe GM products should have special labels, yet 48 percent said they would not buy fresh vegetables produced through genetic modification.

In the end, most Americans are "relatively uninformed about biotech," said Hallman, "and many are still making up their minds."

Dr. William Hallman, associate director of the Food Policy Institute at Rutgers/ Cook College, spoke about the public perception of ag biotechnology.

The Institute has recently been rewarded a $2.5 million grant from USDA to conduct a study on "consumer response to biotech." The New Jersey Cooperative Extension Service, in cooperation with the Institute, will conduct the survey — but they need advice about which questions to ask. Hallman noted that those interested may contact him at his e-mail. The survey will be under way in about three months. For more information or to contribute questions, contact Hallman at (732) 932-1966, ext. 3103.

Pegi Ballister-Howells, New Jersey Farm Bureau, spoke about the N.J. Produce Growers Directory on the Web.

According to Pegi Ballister-Howells, New Jersey Farm Bureau marketing consultant, growers have a free opportunity to sign up to list products grown on the Website, which allows users to select for particular crops and provides them with specific information.

The New Jersey Farm Bureau received matching grants worth about $20,000 to "put this together at no charge to any New Jersey farmer who wants to participate," said Ballister-Howells.

The form can be filled out on the Website or can be obtained directly from Farm Bureau and mailed in.

The Vegetable Growers' Association of New Jersey has about 1,500 members. About 154 exhibitors attended the three-day show from Tuesday through Thursday.

According to Phil Traino, association secretary, growers from all over the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast attended the popular event in Atlantic City, including those from the Eastern Shore, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York.

More event coverage is scheduled for an upcoming issue of Lancaster Farming's Grower & Marketer section.

In team sales she won her first time in competition. She was also winner of a national contest where contestants analyzed data to develop a breeding program to increase yearling weight.

She has served as vice president and president of the Maryland Junior Angus Association.

She has been a member of the National Junior Angus Association since 1996. Last year she qualified for junior association's Silver Award, the second level of the organization's Recognition Program that began in 1972.

PSACF Conducts Convention This Week

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Lancaster Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs and the Pennsylvania State Showmen's Association conducted their 90th annual convention this week.

The convention ran from Wednesday through Saturday at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, Hershey.

Educational opportunities were provided for convention attendees. Seminars included a how-to workshop on getting grants for fairs, explaining the responsibilities of individual in the decision-making process of running a fair, an update on trucking and trucker regulations, improving presentation, finding new contacts and sharpening sponsorship skills, and protecting the fair against terrorism and other assaults.

Approximately 100 attendees took advantage of the opportunity to brush up on skills or learn gain knowledge in a new category of fair classes at the annual Judges School. Seminars included certification in vegetables; quilting and needlework; nuts, fruits, and berries; flowers; art; crocheting and knitting; photography; and crafts and ceramics.

A few roundtable topics included seminars which taught attendees how to use the fairgrounds "more than just fair week and winter storage," and how to deal with "problems of local fairs overlapping dates."

Lamb Market Reports Revised In Mandatory Reporting Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — USDA has introduced two revised daily lamb market news reports and one new daily report to complement existing reports as part of the Livestock Mandatory Reporting Program. These reports became available starting Jan. 7.

The revised reports are the U.S. Daily Lamb Report and the Western Daily Lamb Report. USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) analyzed data obtained from packers to determine the purchasing methods being used by individual plants.

AMS concluded that confidentiality guidelines could be met for negotiated and formula lamb transactions if daily data collected from packers was aggregated in a multiday report. This is the same procedure that is being used for lamb carcass reporting.

AMS will publish these reports each day when aggregated data includes three or more packers and no individual packer is providing more than 70 percent of the data.

If on an individual daily basis the confidentiality guideline is not met, the data will be aggregated with data from succeeding days until the confidentiality guideline is met.

By using this procedure, all reported data for negotiated live lamb and carcass based formula transactions will be published. On days when AMS is unable to publish a report containing new information, AMS will publish a report containing the latest available information.

These revised reports are expected to improve public access to mandatory information by permitting AMS to publish a greater volume of collected data on a more consistent basis in a manner that protects the confidentiality of reported transactions.

The new report is entitled the National Daily Lamb Carcass Cutout Value Report. The cutout value is calculated from data obtained daily from sale transactions of boxed lamb cuts.

The lamb carcass cutout value is a calculation that approximates the value of a lamb carcass based upon reported prices for boxed lamb cuts. This report will provide industry with a measurement and indicator of a lamb carcass value which then can be related to live lamb values.

Dauphin Co. Woman DEP Deputy Secretary For Water Management

HARRISBURG (Dec. 27) — Christine M. Martin of Susquehanna Township, Dauphin County, was recently appointed Deputy Secretary for Water Management in the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

"While in the Governor's Policy Office, Christine played a key role in the development of our new water-resources initiative to inventory and protect Pennsylvania's water from overuse," Gov. Schweiker said.

"In recent years, she has helped guide the development of several key programs including our 'Growing Smarter' land-use initiative, water-resource legislation and fish-consumption advisories, making her a natural choice to oversee DEP's water-management responsibilities."

Martin will oversee the Office of Water Management, which is charged with protecting and managing the quality and quantity of Pennsylvania's water resources.

Office activities include helping farmers manage nutrients, ensuring drinking water safety, helping municipalities manage sewage needs and protecting wetlands.

Martin has served as the Senior Policy Manager in the Governor's Office since April 2001, where she served as an advisor on environmental, infrastructure, energy and regulatory issues. She previously served as Executive Policy Specialist to the Governor, and as a Small Business Coordinator in DEP's Office of Pollution Prevention and Compliance Assistance.

Martin received a master's of public administration degree from The Pennsylvania State University and a bachelor's of arts degree in international studies from Indiana University of Pennsylvania. Martin lives in Susquehanna Township with her husband, Jeffrey.

Schroeder Leaving NCBA To Direct National Cowboy, Western Heritage Museum

DENVER, Colo. — Chuck Schroeder, Chief Executive Officer of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, has announced his resignation effective March 1. Schroeder has accepted a position as Executive Director of the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum in Oklahoma City, Okla.

"It's with mixed emotions that I'm leaving NCBA," Schroeder said. "I have truly enjoyed working with the NCBA staff and producer leadership. I'm excited about the new opportunity with the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum."

Schroeder joined NCBA in November 1995 as the organization's first chief executive officer. During his time at NCBA Schroeder completed the merger of the National Live Stock and Meat Board and the National Cattlemen's Association.

"The NCBA officers and members have really enjoyed working with Chuck and appreciate what he has accomplished, " said NCBA President Lynn Cornwell, a beef producer from Glasgow, Mont. "We realize he is leaving NCBA for a great opportunity. We wish him well in his new position."

Cornwell announced that Terry Stokes, NCBA Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer, has been named interim Chief Executive Officer.

Cornwell said a search committee would be formed with a goal of having a permanent Chief Executive Officer named as soon as possible.

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Corn grain production is estimated at 9.51 billion bushels, down 4 percent from the revised 9.92 billion bushels in 2000, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NCASS).

This is the fourth largest crop behind 1994's record production of 10.1 billion bushels followed by 2000's and 1998's production.

The U.S. grain yield of 138.2 bushels per acre, the second highest yield on record, is up 0.2 bushel from November and 1.3 bushels from 2000.

2000 corn grain production was revised to 9.92 billion bushels, down 0.5 percent from the previous estimate. Acreage planted for all purposes was raised by 6,000 acres, virtually unchanged at 79.6 million acres. Acres harvested for grain was decreased by 292,000 acres, 0.4 percent. The 2000 grain yield, at 136.9 bushels per acre, was lowered 0.2 bushel from the previous estimate.

Sorghum for grain production in 2001 is estimated at 515 million bushels, down 4 percent from the November forecast, and up 9 percent from 2000. Area harvested for grain was estimated at 8.58 million acres, up 11 percent from 2000. Average grain yield, at 59.9 bushels per acre, was 1.0 bushels below the 2000 average yield.

Soybean production in 2001 totaled 2.89 billion bushels, down 1 percent from the Nov. 1 forecast, but 5 percent above 2000. The 2001 production is the highest on record, followed by the 2000 crop of 2.76 billion bushels. The average yield per acre in 2001 is estimated at 39.6 bushels, 0.2 bushel above the Nov. 1 forecast and 1.5 bushels above the 2000 yield.

Late Night At The Farm Show

What Happens After The Crowds Go Home?

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Did you ever wonder what goes on after hours at the Farm Show?

As you may suspect, with a large gathering of people and animals, the Farm Show does not really sleep. After the crowds leave, there's bedding to be changed, animals to wash, feeding and watering to do, — and best of all — socializing with other exhibitors.

Lancaster Farming stayed a little later in the evening to see firsthand what goes on after the crowds go home.

9:30 p.m. — Once the throngs of people have left the alleyways of the barn, work can commence. Exhibitors pushing large wheelbarrows move straw and manure outside, radios continue broadcasting, and animals, as always, are in the wash rack.

By now most of the beef animals are tied outside, as owners take advantage of the fresh air and cool breezes of the tie-out area behind the barn. The animals spend the evening deep in the straw of their makeshift sleeping accommodations.

The stands of organizations and businesses are now quiet, as standholders left for home at 9 p.m. The space of the now-empty stands can serve as host to the cots that will occupy them later in the evening.

Yes, this is a Farm Show scene. Although is looks more like a living room, the boots and sleeping bag give it away as a setup in the dairy barn. The stand is done by Trindle Farm, Mechanicsburg.

Exhibitors take time to take a boots-on nap in the evening.

By early evening Kyle Whitebread, 12, York, has already set up his sleeping arrangements for the night.

By this time of the evening, Kyle Whitebread, 12, York, has already set up his sleeping arrangements for the night. A hammock made by his mother serves as his bed every evening, he said. The hammock is easily removed in the morning for the next round of cattle fitting. Now in his second year at the Farm Show, Kyle brought a Black Angus steer to exhibit in Wednesday's competition.

Kendy Gable, 17, New Enterprise, from Snider Homestead Farms, used the evening hours to wash one of her Guernseys for the next day's competition. Dressed from head to toe in rain gear, she protects herself from the water flying in streams and misting about the room. "I'm a wimp," she laughed.

Chris Snoots, 10, reclined in a lawn chair in the late hours, but "probably won't ever sleep," he said. Snoots, who attended the Farm Show to help his cousins exhibit dairy animals, planned to rise at 1 a.m. and begin to wash animals for the upcoming competition.

In the large arena, exhibitors play a pick-up game of football on top of the grids already in place from the evening's square dancing.

There's no reason to miss Monday night football, even during Farm Show week. Julie Cope, Danville; Dan Kenamon, Mifflinburg; and Steve Bowers, Milton; take time to relax and watch a little television.

10:00 p.m. — The large arena is still alive, with exhibitors taking the opportunity to acquaint their horses with the feel of the arena before competition. From a slim pony and small girl to the dancing paces of the dressage horses to the slick black Percherons, the horses were put through their paces during the temporary peace of the large arena.

Janitors pick up the trash in the hallways, and then begin work among the seats of the Large Arena. The Food Court, once teeming with hungry Farm Show attendees, is now quiet and getting swept and ready for the coming day.

A market steer, spooked by the unfamiliar horses in the arena, gets away from an exhibitor and causes excitement as he runs around the hallways and is quickly roped in.

10:30 p.m. — As the evening advances, rollaway beds, cots, sleeping bags, and even lawn chairs begin to fill the hallways, corners, and alleys of the dairy barn.

Not all exhibitors bothered to bring out their beds, however. "Tomorrow morning is the show, so I'm watching all night to keep them clean," said Aaron Gable, also an exhibitor for Snider Homestead Farms, New Enterprise. "We play cards, and sit around and talk," said Mike Creek, who also shows for the farm. "Most people have someone that stays up all night to feed and keep the cows clean," he said.

At 11:00 p.m. Michele Reasner, of Jemi Jerseys and Holsteins, wraps up her day by relaxing with beef barbecue from the crockpot, an appliance that is found among many of the Farm Show families' stakeouts. Reasner appreciates the employees who work through the night and allow her and her husband to get a little sleep at the hotel during the night.

The employees "stay up and feed our cows and just keep an eye on things," she said. The Reasners brought along a special Ayrshire to keep an eye on during the week. The cow proved to be an attraction during the week as she calved during Farm Show week.

In the large arena, a Farm Show employee drives around a large piece of equipment which evenly waters the arena surface to decrease dust.

11:30 p.m. — Jason Mowrey, Nick Burket, and Scott Fisher, Hard Core Farm, New Enterprise, take the time to re-bed their cows in the evening. "We re-bed everything every night," said Fisher. "You can't do that with the public and the rule is that you have to have everything cleaned up and ready for the public by 8 a.m."

Since it was a show night, "we're giving them a little extra," he said. "We usually figure a bale per head with the pack in already."

Many of the other exhibitors, said Fisher, clean the stalls at 4-5 a.m.

By this time the barn has quieted, but there will be action all night as exhibitors awake to feed and water, then go back for a quick nap before the next round. Although sleep may be in short supply, friends, crockpot food, and friends are not.

Soon, in the small hours of the morning, the barn will again be buzzing for another Farm Show day.

Jason Mowrey, Nick Burket, and Scott Fisher, Hard Core Farm, New Enterprise, take the time to re-bed their cows every evening.

No Reason To Avoid White Foods

COLOMBUS, Ohio — Someone addressed the following question to Martha Filipic, who writes Chow Time for the Ohio Extension: "I want to lose weight, and a friend of mine told me that a good trick is to avoid eating anything white. Is that really a good rule of thumb?

As you probably suspect, that guideline has "fad" written all over it. In some cases it might prove to be useful, but not very often, Filipic answered.

On one hand, some products such as rice and flour are refined to achieve their traditional white color. That processing removes nutrients that the original products possessed.

For example, brown rice has its bran, husk and germ removed to make white rice. Even after it's enriched, white rice has less fiber, vitamin E, phosphorus, and calcium than brown rice.

Still, a cup of cooked long-grain brown rice contains 216 calories, compared with 205 in a cup of cooked long-grain white rice. Brown rice might be more nutrient-dense, but it's very similar in calories to white rice.

Wheat undergoes a similar process when flour is made. However, when buying breads and other grain products, you can't always rely on color to be your "healthfulness meter."

Many brown-colored breads are not made with the whole grain — and the whole grain is what you want. Whole-grain breads give you more fiber, more vitamins and more minerals than breads made with refined flour.

White sugar, potatoes, and pasta are also usually named as culprits in this odd guideline. However, brown sugar offers no weight-loss advantages over white sugar, and potatoes and pasta can be healthful parts of a weight-loss regimen when eaten, like everything else, in moderation. Just watch those toppings!

Besides, if you really took this piece of advice to heart, you could find yourself enjoying a half-gallon of chocolate ice cream, satisfied that you passed up that cauliflower sitting in the refrigerator. That wouldn't do anyone any good at all.

New Weigh Of Life Classes

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — If you're planning on improving your health or losing weight in the new year you can attain your resolution in classes offered by Penn State Cooperative Extension in Lancaster County.

You'll learn how to make simple changes in your eating and activity habits to reduce high levels of blood pressure and cholesterol. Borderline diabetics can also benefit. The workshop at the Conestoga Valley Community Center will be from 6:45-8:45 p.m. on Mondays, Jan. 28, Feb. 4, 11, 18, 25, March 4, 11, 18, 25, April 1 and 8.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

Comfort food.

What's your favorite?

Food plays a large role in most of our lives. Certain things we ate growing up, things that Mom and Grandma, special aunts or friends, fixed for regular and special occasions, are part of the heritage each of us carries into our adult life.

Many of us who graduated from being "the fed" to "the feeder" carried many of those favorites along into our own cooking routines. Along the way, we've added recipes we may have picked up from friends, publications, the internet, special occasions — or out of desperation.

Cold, dark, wintry days especially seem to bring out a need for those comfort foods, many of which are hot, filling and satisfying, both to stomach and to the psyche.

Macaroni and cheese — beloved by the grandkids as "mac and cheese" — seems to be a perennial favorite. The baked version, with buttered bread crumbs crispy and brown on top, was a special treat for me as a child. As a younger mom, I found a recipe for an enhanced version, which includes loose sausage, browned along with chopped green pepper and onion, and the cheese melted in a white sauce.

On a chilly day last week, I tucked some roundsteak into a pan to roast, enhanced with some brown gravy mix, while I trotted between house and barn sketching calves for registry. Just before lunch, milk-fixed instant mashed potatoes went into the microwave as an accompaniment.

After years of vowing never to slide into instant potato use, I went over the wall from potato peeling. They must be whipped up with lots of milk and butter, never, ever, ever, with water. Some days they show up with pork and sauerkraut, sometimes with meatballs and gravy.

Soups and stews are great comfort food, too. Beef vegetable is a personal wintertime favorite, simmered for a couple of hours on the stove while various additions join the base-starter beef and broth. Sometimes it's chicken or turkey corn soup, maybe with a handful of noodles crushed for extra body.

My dad's choice was always tomato soup, made with Mom's home-canned tomatoes, a pinch of baking soda and milk. Fixing it never fails to bring his memory to mind, while recalling how much he enjoyed this quick, healthy and satisfying simple food. Grilled cheese sandwiches — with the familiy tradition of adding sweet pickles or relish — were the expected accompaniment.

Meatloaf is another standard comfort food, usually fixed in my kitchen with an "icing" of catsup, just the way mom used to make it. Scalloped potatoes make a great side dish, but baked ones — white or sweet — are a quicker and tasty alternative.

Though I've rarely heard it mentioned as a comfort food, The Farmer appreciates a bowl of fruit salad fixed in the refrigerator. So our shelves usually hold a few cans of the requisite canned pineapple and canned mixed fruit, to which bananas, grapes, fresh oranges, maybe some kiwi, or extra home-canned fruits might be added. The last few spoonfuls usually become part of a glorified gelatin dessert.

While we enjoy sampling new dishes, few folks I know seek out culinary comfort in the likes of raddichio or capers, artichokes or argula.

Just let us stoke up against the chill of January with meat and potatoes, fresh homemade bread, and a hearty bowl of steaming hot soup.

And, even in January, it's never too cold cold for ice cream. Or too hot in July for chocolate.

Rabbits Hop To Show Fame

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Talk to Jenna Carnibe a few minutes, and you'll quickly discover that being a rabbit and cavy queen is no hippity-hop job.

The 17-year-old is well versed in rabbit and cavy breeds and the characteristics required to garner points in each category. Put 20 different breeds in front of her and she can identify and specify the idiosyncrasies of each variety.

"I want to be a vet, and this (showing rabbits) has given me a head start," Jenna said. "I already know a lot more about rabbits than many vets do."

Jenna's statement is not boastful. Instead, it's meant to reveal the astounding amount of information that many breeders accumulate in caring for rabbits.

Feed and health care are important proponents in raising champion breeds. Jenna, who lives in Butler, raises about 70 head and enters about 20 shows annually. About nine years ago, Jenna started with a pet rabbit, a Dutch breed. She and her brother soon added Mini-Lops and later, Jersey Woolies.

Since then, her 15-year-old brother has relinquished his rabbits to pursue other interests, but Jenna continues to add to the stock kept on the small farmette owned by parents Ken and Connie Carnibe.

To become queen, candidates must be a member of the state Rabbit and Cavy Association and fill out an application detailing their experience with the industry. At the state convention conducted each February, candidates are interviewed by judges, and must judge four classes and identify 20 different breeds. Prospective queens must present a 3-5 minute promotional talk about the industry.

In addition to being selected queen, Jenna was also named Pennsylvania youth breeder of the year. This is dependent on the running total of points accumulated from showing and placings for rabbits. She also won first place in senior division judging and breed identification.

At the national level, Jenna rates second in overall judging.

"This experience really ties into my future plans to become a vet, helps me with public speaking, and teaches me responsibility and record keeping," Jenna said.

Jenna said that she enters her rabbits mostly in Ohio competitions since that state is only about one hour from home, closer than most of the competitions in the eastern part of her home state.

As queen, Jenna has attended many county fairs to promote the industry. To attract attention, she accompanies an association member who is dressed in a rabbit costume. Fairgoers are quick to ask questions and eager to accept literature about rabbits and the association.

In addition to caring and showing rabbits, Jenna, a junior at Butler Senior High School, is a member of the marching band, which played at the Citrus Bowl Parade, and of the French Club. Jenna is a member of the Pittsburgh Pride fast-pitch softball traveling team and the recreation center team. She is president of her county's 4-H club.

More than 800 entries were entered in the rabbit and cavy divisions at Farm Show. Jenna garnered ribbons for best of breed in mini-lop division and two best varieties in Jersey Woolies.

"Rabbits get stressed easily, especially lops," Jenna said. "The rabbits spook easily and run into the sides of the cage, which can break the rabbits' back."

The Lops long ears also break easily if bumped.

"It seems I lose my best ones," she said.

During Farm Show week, Jenna helped care for the 800 rabbit entries from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. During judging, she remained until 1 a.m.

These hours alone show that raising rabbits is much more than a hobby. It's a job, and one that points to a prospective career for Jenna.

Although chickens were banned from the Farm Show this year because of the risk of avian influenza, some Chinese roosters were sneaked in the back door. David Nolt examines two of the Chinese roosters that attracted the attention of collectors.

"Geronimo" is Best of the Show out of 700 entries in rabbit and cavy competition. The Champagne d' Argent rabbit is owned by Ed Hildebrand, Biglerville dairy herdsman. The breed is born colored coal black, the fur becomes silver-colored by 4-5 weeks, and lightens after each molt, becoming almost white in maturity. The breed originated from France and arrived in the U.S. between 1922-1925. Hildebrand and his wife Ellen owned about 50 Champagne d' Argents that they breed and sell. Outstanding breed characteristics are condition (firmness of flesh), quality of fur coat, color, conformation, and meat quality. As a youth, Hildebrand showed heifers at the Farm Show. About nine years ago, Hildebrand begin raising rabbits as a hobby.

Celebrating Midlife: The Best Is Yet To Be

Don't vegetate—rejuvenate!

Have the "ho-hums" this mid-January day? A sure cure is to "escape" the day-to-day routine and plan a trip where you can enjoy a beautiful mountain landscape, see a nationally-known antique show, participate in tours related to horticulture, history, music or horse racing! While you're at it, why not attend some outstanding educational programs tailored to help you meet the challenges of today's midlife years.

Interested? Then mark your calendar for April 7-9, for the "Celebrating Midlife: The Best Is Yet To Be" Conference to be held at the beautiful Oglebay Resort and Conference Center in Wheeling, West Virginia.

Cooperative Extension educators from Penn State University, Ohio State University, West Virginia University, and The University of Maryland are collaborating to bring you a unique conference filled with fun and learning.

With two humorous speakers and 45 different workshops dealing with personal development, financial security, health and wellness, family connections, housing, and caregiving responsibilities, you're guaranteed not to have a "ho-hum" attitude at this conference!

"Forty is the old age of youth, 50 is the youth of old age." Victor Hugo (1820-1885) in this quote could have been talking about us in modern times. Midlife or middle age is a relatively new phenomenon because people are living longer and raising smaller families. We have more years ahead in which to direct our energies after age 40, 50, 60 or 70. Never before have there been so many challenges, changes and choices for those of us in the middle years.

Just to wet your appetite, here are some of the workshop titles: "Do You Want to Work Forever," "Smart Money Moves for Midlife," "Caregiving Includes Caring For Yourself," "Walking in the Footsteps of Our Past," or "Active for Life."

Through these workshops you will be able to take normal changes in stride, consider new options, feel more in control of your life, build on the strengths of your family and prepare yourself to deal with the unexpected events. Whether you come for your own enrichment or come to learn how to help others with whom you work, we guarantee you will leave more "energized" to enjoy the years ahead with a renewed sense of confidence. What else could you ask for?

Tempted to find out more on the conference? Check out the complete conference on the website at www.celebratingmidlife.org or contact your local county extension office. You can also write to me, Pat Leach, Extension Agent, Penn State Cooperative Extension, 827 Water Street, Indiana, PA 15701 or call me at (724) 465-3880.

If you're worried about getting to Oglebay Resort, don't. The resort is easily accessible from the PA turnpike, I-79 South of Pittsburgh or Rt. 70 West. If you're interested in saving money, take advantage of the early bird registration rate good through Feb. 1, and the special conference room rates at Oglebay good through Feb. 14.

Be good to yourself and plan for this great getaway event. After all, don't you deserve it?

Delaware County Teens Attend National 4-H Congress

SPRINGFIELD (Delaware Co.) — Marisa Blagman, of Brookhaven, a student at West Chester University, and Jana Holt of Wallingford, a student at Strath Haven High School, recently returned from Atlanta, Ga. where they participated in the 2001 National 4-H Congress. They represented Delaware County and were part of a 42-member delegation from Pennsylvania. This event was attended by over 1,100 teens from 47 states and Puerto Rico.

The four-day event was full of interesting events, excellent workshops and well-known speakers and also included a community service project. The National 4-H Congress has a long history of providing a quality educational and multicultural experience to address the needs and issues of youth ages 15-19, while helping to develop capable, competent, and caring citizens.

Attendees had the pleasure of hearing several outstanding and notable speakers. Each speaker focused on the theme "Celebrate the Possibilities."

Dan Thurman talked about "Celebrate Our Differences. Dr. Robbie Melton, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs for the Tennessee Board of Regents, focused on "Serve One Another."

Katie Harmon, 2002 Miss America, spoke on the topic, "Creative Positive Changes," and "Stand Up and Speak Out" was the title for Dan Clark, former NFL football player and writer. All speakers stressed leadership and self-determination.

Another highlight was the 4-H member participation in Monday's CNN Talk Back Live show. 4-H members had a chance to voice their opinions on national television. They also received a tour of the CNN studio.

Every 4-H member participated in the "Art of the Season" community service project. The "Art of the Season" is a holiday event held by the Children's Healthcare System. Children from the community attend workshops to make holiday crafts. All proceeds go to the Children's Healthcare Systems. The 4-H members manned different stations and helped children create their crafts.

Marisa Blagman

Jana Holt

All participants were also asked to bring new children's books to National Congress. Over 1,300 books were collected and donated to the Children's Healthcare Systems to be distributed to children and their parents to encourage reading.

Featured Recipe

Hearty or thin, clear or thick, hot or cold, soups have long been a menu favorite. Technically a soup is any liquid food in which a solid is cooked.

But combining vegetables, pasta, meat, and cheese often changes soup from a liquid form to a thick, full-of-flavor meal.

Originally chowders were primarily seafood mixtures, but later the word was also used for one vegetable or a combination along with meat or fish.

Today's featured recipe is a creamy ham and cheddar chowder that the 1990 Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess Kristen Metzker shared during her reign.

For those who are unaware, a great source of recipes is the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services Inc.(PPDPS) Each year, they print a booklet of favorite recipes from each county dairy princess.

For a copy, check with your county dairy princess or contact PPDPS at 23515 Range Rd., Union City, PA 16438 or call (814) 694-2661.

5 cups milk
1 cup flour

Add cheese and lower heat to simmer. Add ham and undrained veggies. Gently stir to mix veggies through. Bring almost to a boil, but remove from heat before boiling. Serves 12-14.

Making The Home A Safe Place: A Father's Role

Recently, I read an article written by Roland C. Warren, president of the National Fatherhood Initiative that offered wonderful insight into ways that fathers can help to "secure the home front" during a time when many families may be feeling terribly vulnerable. The article starts with the following excerpt:

"Two 7-year-old boys who live down the road from me have built a secret hiding place under a large bush. They've stocked it with toy guns, shovels for digging, and old clothes in case they ever need to be in their hideout for days on end. These two boys are getting ready just in case the bad guys who crashed planes into the World Trade Centers and the Pentagon attack their neighborhood."

No doubt, families of America have been profoundly effected by the event of Sept. 11. And children now, more than ever, need fathers to help provide them with a sense of security at home.

In fact, Warren writes, "...America needs its fathers to provide security for their children as surely as America needs its government and military to provide security for the nation."

Research and experience tells us that children most often turn to fathers when they feel threatened.

I think of my own 5-year-old son who has recently been experiencing some very real bedtime fears of monsters and other imaginary creatures. It isn't me he comes to at 2 a.m. but his father. It seems that dad has what it takes to make the monsters go away at least for the night!

Children today face fears far greater than imaginary monsters, including the very frightening reality that terrorists can invade their homeland.

What can dads do to help make their home feel like a safe place for their children? According to Warren, there are at least four things that fathers can do to secure the home front.

- Fathers must take great care to respect and support the mother of their children. A secure marriage or parental relationship creates a secure environment for children. This is especially important in a non-custodial environment, where children's sense of security is linked to mother's sense of security. When children have parents who model respect and support for each other, they are left with a feeling of safety and security that goes a long way in helping them to deal with the many frightening events that can occur outside of the family environment.
- Fathers need to make an extra effort to spend time with their children. Fathers need to make sure that they are available for their children, especially when children need to talk about their fears and insecurities. Warren writes, "Children don't schedule time to discuss their fears and anxieties." It's crucial that fathers are available to listen to their children and to discuss their concerns with them. Quality communication between father and child comes best when fathers have established a consistent presence in their home and "put in the time" needed for children to feel comfortable with them.
- Fathers need to model an appropriate response to frightening events such as the Sept. 11 tragedy. Research shows that fathers play an important role in helping their children, especially sons, to regulate their emotions and properly manage their anger. Dads need to be proactive and use events such as Sept. 11 as an opportunity to talk to their child about difficult issues. This might include a discussion about issues such as discrimination or the appropriate use of military force.
- Fathers need to continue to show affection to their children. Children need the security that comes from knowing that they are wanted, accepted and loved unconditionally by their father. Affection comes in many forms, including verbal encouragement, participation in your child's events, listening without judgment, and of course in the form of pats on the back, hugs and kisses. In my family, it happens when my husband ends a living room wrestling match with a big squeeze for our son, or when he tells our 7-year-old daughter what a beautiful young lady she is becoming.

In times such as these, fathers owe it to their children to "secure the home front," to be there for them, and to help create a safe haven at home in a world that often isn't. Have a happy New Year and may your family time together be the best ever.

Penn State Research Explores Food Safety Practices Of Seniors

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When it comes to avoiding foodborne illness through safe food preparation and storage, senior citizens often are their own worst enemies, says a registered dietitian in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Because they have weakened immune systems and reduced stomach acid, the elderly are especially susceptible to foodborne illnesses," says Mary Alice Gettings, Penn State Cooperative Extension nutrition and health agent in Beaver County. "But the methods they use to thaw, cook, handle and store foods often increase their risk of becoming sick."

Foodborne pathogens such as listeria, Salmonella and E. coli can cause flu-like symptoms, and even death, among susceptible populations. According to the Centers for Disease Control, an estimated 76 million cases of foodborne illness kill about 5,000 people and hospitalize 325,000 more in the U.S. each year. Many more cases likely go unreported, mistaken for other bacterial or viral infections.

To develop educational strategies for reducing the chances of foodborne illness among the elderly, Gettings and Nancy Ellen Kiernan, Penn State Cooperative Extension program evaluation specialist, studied the food safety practices of seniors in three urban and three rural counties in the western Pennsylvania. The research was published recently in the Journal of Nutrition Education.

Participants were 60- to 85-years old and prepared at least five meals a week. Conducting focus groups in senior citizen centers, the researchers asked seniors how they cook, cool and thaw meat, poultry and seafood and where they got the idea to do it that way. "We chose to study seniors because of their vulnerability, and because there was very little information in the literature about food safety practices among the elderly," Gettings explains.

The study found that, although participants used both appropriate and inappropriate food safety practices, many of their methods increase their risk of foodborne illness.

For instance, many seniors failed to use a meat thermometer, which is the most scientifically sound method of ensuring that food is cooked thoroughly enough to reduce harmful levels of pathogens. Instead, common practices included relying on a specific amount of cooking time and using utensils to cut food open and checking doneness by sight.

"We heard comments such as, 'If you take chicken out and see blood, then you know you have to leave it in longer,' and, 'I wiggle the turkey leg, and if it's loose, I guess it's done,'" says Gettings. "Barriers to adopting the proper method included resistance to change, the perceived inconvenience of using a thermometer and a lack of resources they say they don't own and can't afford a thermometer."

Seniors also commonly used inappropriate practices for thawing and cooling foods. Risky thawing methods included placing frozen food in water that was never replaced with fresh water. Among inappropriate cooling methods was placing large quantities of hot food into one large container to refrigerate, rather than portioning it into smaller containers so it could cool faster.

When asked how they learned these practices, many seniors cited experience ('I've done this for years and it hasn't hurt me yet') and relatives. "Some said they learned these methods from their mothers or grandmothers," says Gettings. "That means an 85-year-old may be using knowledge that was accepted 100 years ago but today has been proven incorrect."

The study also looked at ways to educate and motivate seniors to change their food safety methods. "Many told us that they need information from credible sources such as educators — about the scientific facts and health risks associated with unsafe practices," Gettings says.

"They also expressed a preference for educational programs and materials that are geared specifically for them," she says. "For example, programs held in libraries, health centers, churches and other locations frequented by seniors provide an excellent opportunity to overcome their strong resistance to using a thermometer. Brochures and fact sheets with illustrations — perhaps timed to coincide with holidays or other seasonal events — can reach large numbers of seniors at health fairs, in church bulletins or in doctors' waiting rooms.

Postcard Club To Meet

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Postcard Club will meet Monday evening, January 21 at 7 p.m. Meetings are held at the Farm and Home Center, located on Arcadia Road, off the Manheim Pike (Rt. 72) in back of Jones Pontiac/Honda in Lancaster.

This month's program will be members displaying a postcard having a connection to the number two, in honor of the New Year, 2002. The public is invited to the 7 p.m. meetings as well as to visit with members who have brought postcards to sell and trade from 5:30 p.m.

The club was founded 11 years ago and has about a 400-person membership. About 70 local members attend the monthly meetings where they share a common interest in the history and enjoyment of collecting and researching postcards.

Local, national and foreign views, holiday greetings, and thematic topics on almost every subject under the sun can be found on postcards. Members will be happy to answer any questions you might have about your own postcards — new or old.

If you are looking for a recipe but can't find it, send your recipe request to Lou Ann Good, Cook's Question Corner, in care of Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. There's no need to send a self-addressed stamped envelope. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible. Check your recipe to make sure you copy the right amounts and complete instructions for making the recipe. Sometimes we receive numerous answers to the same request, but cannot print each one.

Answers to recipe requests should be sent to the same address. You may also e-mail questions and answers to lgood.eph@lnpnews.com

Notice: Several readers write that they have problems accessing this address. The common mistake is that readers are substituting an "i" for the lowercase "l (L)" needed in two places. If you are having problems reaching this address, please check to make sure you are typing a lowercase "l (L)" in both places and not a lower or uppercase "i" or "I."

ANSWER — Surprisingly, we were inundated with dandelion wine recipes, which had been a request from Jewelene Fuller, Hanover. Although we can't print them all, here are a few more. Here is one from Gloria Minckler, who writes that her father-in-law gave the recipe to her 50 years ago. She writes that it gets better with age, especially after 2-4 years in the bottle.

Dandelion Wine

Pour 4 quarts boiling water on 2 quarts fresh dandelion blossoms. Let stand 2 hours then strain into a crock. Slice one lemon and one orange, both with skin left on, and add to juice with one pound seeded raisins and 3 pounds sugar. Mix well. Add one half yeast cake spread on a half slice of toast. ANSWER — Many people want to know the different between chocolate milk and chocolate drink. Nicole Powell, Clarion-Venango dairy princess, explains that although both start with the word chocolate, there is a big difference. Chocolate drink is water-based and contains no fluid milk. Chocolate milk contains milk, which contains calcium, phosphorous, and vitamins A and D to help strengthen teeth and bones. She also writes that chocolate milk has only 58 more calories than an 8-ounce glass of whole milk. Although you might think that it is a lot, Powell said, compared to soft drinks it isn't because chocolate milk contains nutrients and soft drinks don't. But if you're concerned about calories, use low-fat chocolate milk. Powell sent in this variation of hot chocolate. She writes, "Nothing goes over better with my family, and it's pretty simple to make too."

Hot Chocolate

1 cup chocolate syrup
8-ounces marshmallow cream
½ gallon milk

With mixer, combine chocolate syrup and marshmallow cream thoroughly. Add hot milk and mix until well combined. Makes 10-12 servings.

Delicious soy milk drinks can be made in a liquefier or in a malted milk mixer. Add 1-2 tablespoons soy powder or soy milk to juice or desired liquid.

Cashew Cream

1 cup rich soy milk
1 teaspoon hone or 1-2 dates
½ cup cashews
Pinch salt

Liquefy all ingredients together for 2-3 minutes. Delicious over cereal. Thin down if used for drinking.

Nothing Nutty About This Idea

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A reader writes, I'd like to add more nuts to my diet, but I'm worried about fat and calories. Are the nutrients worth it?

Martha Filipic of Ohio Extension said, "If you're like most people, you probably can't afford to simply add calories to your diet and not expect to gain weight. But in a nutshell, nuts in moderation are a great component of a healthful diet. Substituting nuts for other sources of protein and fat could be very beneficial."

For one thing, nuts come from plants. That means that the fats in nuts are plant-based, which are almost always more healthful than animal-based fats. Plant-based fats are much higher in monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats, compared with the saturated fats common in meat, dairy products and other animal-based foods.

In fact, a recent study at the University of California-Davis found that walnuts in particular may be helpful. They contain alpha-linolenic acid, a fat that helps reduce LDL (the 'bad') cholesterol — the kind that's most likely to damage coronary arteries. Other research reached similar findings on almonds. Studies indicate that alpha-linolenic acid can reduce the risk of stroke.

The UC-Davis study found that eating 1.5 ounces of walnuts a day — about one-third cup — was enough to have an effect. That study supports findings from nutrition researchers at Loma Linda University, the University of Barcelona and the Nurses' Health Study.

Foods from plants — including grains, fruits and vegetables as well as nuts — are also being examined for the phytochemicals they contain and their impact on health. While research into these dietary components is for the most part preliminary, it shows the importance of focusing on whole foods rather than supplements.

Different types of nuts have different levels of nutrients, but nuts are often good sources of thiamin, niacin, phosphorus, zinc and folate, and some are excellent sources of selenium, copper, magnesium, manganese and vitamin E. To check on the fat, fiber and calories in any particular type of nut, check the U.S. Department of Agriculture's searchable Nutrient Database at http://www.nal.usda.gov/fnic/cgi-bin/nut—search.pl.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Usually I write my articles in the morning, but I've decided to write one this winter afternoon as the next weeks will be busy with appointments for Allen's operation.

The sun is streaming in the big bay window that is full of plants. The welcome winter sun warms the soft grey rug. When it is 20 degrees outside, we appreciate the warmth of our homes. Several of my plants are blooming, and I enjoy their colors and fragrance. My daughter gave me a container of narcissus that has just burst into bloom.

Most of our gifts this year were of a practical nature. There was a big, white textured blanket from another daughter in Maine. It was manufactured in a mill near her home. She gave my husband a heavy, green plaid shirt. One thing that was almost overdone was candy — we got four boxes. I'm thinking some will be frozen for later. We also received several candles, which will last a while.

One child goes to the trouble of having a family calendar printed. Each month shows pictures of the grandchildren. And, a niece has put together a cookbook that includes old familiar recipes from family members. My sister hand painted a big flower pot which is almost too pretty to use. She also paints pictures and frames them as gifts. She has taken lessons in painting for many years.

Soon it will be time to think of making another braided rug. This year I was given new wool material especially for rugs. I am accustomed to ripping garments for material. This will be simply too easy. But, it still takes time to baste before I braid and then it takes time to lace the braids together. So far I've given rugs, of their choice, to the six oldest grandchildren.

Horse Show Judges Training School To Take Place At Penn State

EBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) — Penn State University will host a horse show judges training clinic Feb. 22-24 to train and prepare interested people on how to judge open, 4-H youth and fair horses shows.

The program was developed to train 4-H or open show judges, applicants for the Pa. 4-H judges' list, coaches and senior members of 4-H horse judging teams the skill of judging equine events and shows.

Featured speakers will be Jon Wolf, professor of horse sciences, from Black Hawk College East, Kewanee, Ill. Dr. Wolf served as Black Hawk East horse judging team coach winning many national and world show contests. He is a judge of POA, AMHA, AMHR, IBHA, 4-H and open horse shows. Lore Homer, American Driving Society and American Horse Show Association registered judge, is an owner and driver of Downhill Storm Cloud who was selected by Horse World's People's Choice as the Morgan Carriage Horse of the Century.

The education areas to be discussed during the weekend training are as follows: showmanship, stock seat equitation, hunt seat equitation, hunter under saddle, western pleasure, western riding, ethics, conduct, and responsibilities of a judge, saddle seat pleasure and equitation.

There will be a second training option for youth team judging coaches. Some of the topics will feature: "Resources for Judging Teams and Coaches" along with "Analysis of Form to Function and Selecting the Stock Type Horse."

In addition, Brian Egan, Ann Swinker, Pat Comerford and Keith Bryan — Penn State's equine science program faculty, will be conducting sessions on the Pennsylvania 4-H youth program rules and regulations, coaching youth horse judging teams, conformation judging and selection.

The Pa. 4-H Horse Show Rulebook Test will be given and is strongly suggested for anyone wanting to be added to the 4-H horse show judges' list beginning in 2003. This certification test will be given during the training.

Registrations will be accepted by mail or fax through Feb. 1, 2002. Registrations are due by Feb. 1, 2002. Program cost is $50. Late registrations will be charged an additional charge of $10 per person to register. Walk-in registrations will be accepted as space allows. The registration fee includes all costs of instruction and instructional materials, beverage breaks, and lunch on Saturday.

Temperatures Key To Increasing Floriculture Diversity

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Cool temperature treatments may be the key to the successful greenhouse production of osteospermums, native South African wild daisies that are gaining popularity in the United States as ornamental plants.

Ohio State University horticulturists have found that vernalization, a production technique of subjecting plants to low temperatures (between 32 and 45 degrees Fahrenheit), promoted and synchronized flowering, increased flowering times and reduced overall stem growth - characteristics that make for ideal floriculture crops.

"Our goal is to find crops that can be grown economically and fill a specific niche," said horticulturist Jim Metzger. "People get tired of the same cultivars. Introducing new species is just one of many ways the floriculture industry tries to increase diversity to keep up consumer interest."

The technique of vernalization eliminates the limitations of sporadic or non-flowering greenhouse growers were facing by relying on day length to control flower development. For many plants, day length dictates when and how much they flower.

"Osteospermum will flower without the cold requirement but it takes a long time and it's spotty. Growers want plants with full flowers that will bloom at the same time," said Metzger. "Looking at vernalization can improve the aesthetic characteristics of the plant, producing a product that is appealing to consumers."

Vernalization also provides growers with a product they can produce quicker and more cheaply. "If a greenhouse grower can increase the flowering time, then he or she can get the product shipped out quicker," said Metzger. "Vernalization also saves on energy costs because a grower is heating the greenhouse five degrees above freezing rather than to 65 or 70 degrees."

Osteospermum, although considered a weed in its native region, is becoming more popular in the United States as an ornamental plant because of its diversity in flower color, shape of the petals and foliage and its full display of flowers. "Many people really like osteospermum. It's got a lot of variety to it," said Metzger. "The plant produces striking flower colors that just seem to glow back at you. When you seen one in bloom, it just catches your eye."

Osteospermum is related to such plants as the Cape daisy, also a South African species, and the Freeway daisy, mainly grown in California. Osteospermum is marketed mainly as a potted houseplant or a landscape plant. Normally planted in mid-to-late spring, the annual plant will produce flowers that last through summer, as well as bloom again in the fall.

Pennsylvania Farm Show Entertainment For All Ages

Farm Show visitors from New Jersey are Mark and Cinty Razzano with children, Christina, 11; Caitlyn, 8; Anthony, 4; and Isabella, 1. The family came to find more animals to add to their melange of goats, turkeys, guinea fowl, which they raise on 6½ acres.

Visiting the Farm Show brings back memories of former farmers Fred and Yvonne Brown, Orrstown, with children Chancy, 9; Cody, 9; Cecilia, 2; and Caleb, 16 months.

Chris Lubkemann Jr. designed Micro Pong, a scaled-down version of table tennis using a table measuring only 48x26½-inches. The contest was open for all ages with Abner Lapp, Lancaster, placing first for the third year in a row.

Executive Pong was also available. This mini-version can be played between two players or alone. Lubkemann said that he often plays Executive Pong while waiting in airports. The game requires intense concentration because the ball bounces back in forth rapidly within a small area. Participants sweated profusely although they barely moved from their original positions.

Megan credits the sheep industry for their willingness to help novice showman and is pleased to be a spokesperson for the industry. She learned to sheer her own flock. She likes lamb "any way its cooked." She also works on a dairy farm, helps with horses, and judges livestock. She plans to become a large animal veterinarian.

First Vegetable Bread Contest At Farm Show

Five judges evaluated 44 breads, and narrowed them down to five winners. The breads were to include at least one cup of Pennsylvania vegetables. The judges picked the winning breads according to texture, flavor, creativity, overall appearance, and other qualities.

Coming in second place was Katie Myers from Dallastown, York County. Marion Walker, Carmichaels, Greene County, won the third place ribbon. Fourth place went to Dorothy Martin, Conestoga. Winning fifth place was Charlene Aber, Columbia Cross Roads, Bradford County.

PINA COLADA ZUCCHINI BREAD

- 3 cups sugar
- 1 cup oil
- 4 eggs
- 4 cups flour

Sheep-To-Shawl Contest Always A Crowd-Pleaser

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the 21st year, the sheep-to-shawl contest opened with a full audience in the Small Arena last week at the Farm Show.

The Farm Show crowd watched as the four teams each sheared a sheep, carded and spun the wool, and wove the new threads into shawls in approximately 2½ hours.

Following the completion of the shawls, judges compared evaluations and awarded first place to Yorktowne Spinners, York County.

This year marked the team's fourth year competing in the contest. This win was their third first place. Last year they took second place.

Second place went to the Penn-Wheels team, Montgomery County; third to Kittens in a Basket, Bradford County; and fourth place to "Ewe-niquely 60 percent 'Man-Made,'" Dauphin County.

During opening comments Pennsylvania's first lady Kathy Schweiker noted that the contest, one of the most popular of the Farm Show, provided a way for the public to see the wool production process from raw wool, still on the sheep, to end result.

The event highlights the contribution of Pennsylvania's sheep industry to the commonwealth, said Schweiker, who began the contest with a call to "belly up your sheep." Shearers responded by shearing the stomach area of the sheepm — wool that is discarded.

The Team

"It's a good spinning wool. It's not really crimpy so when the shawl comes off the loom it really looks finished," said spinner Greta Dise, Glen Rock.

The Yorktown team also did well in the individual contests, winning the teams' choice award, an award decided by the competitors. Additionally shearer Nate Good, Windsor, took home a first place in the shearer division and Kris Peters won the weaver award.

Team members also included Leslie Orndorff, spinner, and Sandy Britcher, spinner. The Yorktowne team traditionally donates a portion of the proceeds to the York County 4-H Fiber Club.

The second-place Penn-Wheels team, who also have four years of experience competing, used the wool of a splashy colored Jakob sheep. Weaver Wendy Chavin, Lafayette Hill, worked a traditional weave, the rosepath pattern, into the shawl. "We always use a Jakob sheep, since we like to use their natural color," she said.

"We like to do it (compete in the contest) because it's fun, really. It's a nice group — it's an excuse to get together," she said.

Stephanie Dougherty, a spinner for the "Ewe-niquely 60 percent 'Man-Made,'" team, cards the wool to prepare it.

The team "Kittens in a Basket" consisted of members between the ages of 15-20 years old. They are part of the Cat's Cradle Spinners and Weavers Guild of Bradford County. The purples of their shawl echoed the color of the team's matching tie-dyed shirts and socks.

The team used a Shetland crossbred sheep to furnish the wool, preferring its long (more than seven inches) fibers for their finished product. Shearer Michael Horton took first place in the fleece division.

It was the first time to compete as a group for the "Ewe-niquely 60 percent 'Man-Made'" group from Dauphin County. Spinner Stephanie Dougherty took home the spinner award. Three contestants out of the group of five were new to competition, said Dougherty.

Four judges, including a wool judge and a head judge, evaluate not only the finished shawl but also other factors.

Judging criteria includes team identification for the appearance of all members, speed and lack of second cuts for shearing, an even spin for the spinning division, originality and difficulty of design, and uniformity and errors in the weaving. Teams are also awarded a bonus for the order of their finish.

Other Activities

The contestants had previously submitted articles for the writing segment of the program and had completed the interview portion of the contest. The last part, public speaking, allowed them to present their posters to the audience in the Small Arena.

Also during the event the Lancaster Spinners and Weavers Guild hosted the opportunity for children and adults to try their hand at spinning, carding, and weaving.

The Caledonian Highland dancers of Bucks County brought ethnic flair to the event. In addition Melissa Weaver Dunning hosted the Scottish wool waulking and traditional ballads of England.

Goats Become State Ambassador's Passion

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Most teen-agers who show animals were born into it or at least started showing at a young age. But 19-year-old Kristopher Trowbridge made a decision to raise and show goats only three years ago.

Trowbridge now owns 10 head and is the Pennsylvania Goat Ambassador responsible for promoting goats and goat dairy products.

The Perry County resident started with grade animals and upgraded to registered Nubians, Toggenburgs, and Sannens. He raises them on Curt and Helen Snyder's farm.

"At first I was hesitate about drinking goat's milk, but now I think it is delicious and think cow milk tastes odd," he said.

One of the first things Trowbridge did when he became interest in goats was to join the Pennsylvania Goat Association.

He said, "The goat community is small, and we get to know each other very well and become best friends."

In June 2000 Trowbridge was appointed alternate representative and enjoyed promoting the association. "I want to make the public more aware of goats and the association," he said.

In anticipation of being selected the state ambassador, Trowbridge wrote an essay on what he was doing for the industry and why the position was right for him. At the state association show in June 2001, Trowbridge was interviewed by a committee and appointed to the one year position. He also chairs the merit and awards committee for the association.

Kristopher Trowbridge is the state ambassador for the Pennsylvania Goat Association.

Of his own herd, Trowbridge said the most frustrating thing is deciding which ones to keep because I can't keep them all, but they're like pets to me."

Trowbridge graduated from high school by correspondence. He hopes to attend a community college next year and study ag-related subjects.

"I always want to raise dairy goats. I prefer a small operation because it is easier to manage and concentrate on improving," Trowbridge said. "I hope to show a national grand champion goat someday."

He also wants to become a classifier, which is an appraisal of goats for the American Dairy Goat Association.

He is the son of Robert Trowbridge and Jacalyn Van Dervark. His mother has a herd of meat goats and his brother Jeremy, 20, shares dairy goat responsibilities with him.

QUESTION — Ben Kinsinger, 686 Kensinger Rd., Meyersdale, wants to know where to find two old gas engines in any condition for an old Maytag washing machine motor that used a glass jar turned upside down for the gas. He also wants a very small ½ horsepower New Holland gas engine made in New Holland.

QUESTION — Louise Hannum, Wagontown, wants to know if there is any interest in a complete 1968 Franklin Mint Antique Car Coin Collection Series I. It includes 25 bronze coins dated from 1901-1925 with descriptive booklet.

QUESTION — Rebecca D. Zook, Gap, wants to know where to find books and literature about horse dentistry, horse teeth filing, and related subjects.

QUESTION — Evan Weidman, 3418 Ritner Hwy., Newville, has a small sausage stuffer made by Enterprise Mfg. Co., Philadelphia. He needs a lock nut for the stuffing horn. Where can he find it?

QUESTION — A reader wants to know if anyone knows where to find parts for a Rival Grinder/Chopper (electric). Needed is a cutter blade model 2100M/I.

QUESTION — Kenneth Wirz, White Hall, Md., is looking for a piece of Guardian Service cookware to complete his mother's set. The piece is called the kettle oven, which has many uses such as baking and as a water bath canner. The piece is large with a glass lid, wire racks for baking and lifting jars when canning. QUESTION — Leroy Serventi, Croydon, would like to know of any vegetable gardening clubs or groups in Bucks County, Pa., or in Burlington County, N.J.

ANSWER — E. Burkholder, 1075 Richmond Rd., Fleetwood, PA 19522, wanted to know the value of an Avon collection with more than 65 pieces. Elizabeth of Schuylkill County writes that a book is published annually listing values for Avon pieces. The book includes photographs and is very expensive, but can be found in the antiques, hobbies, and collectables sections of bookstores and libraries.

ANSWER — Ronald Kieffer, Hamburg, asked if any of our readers smoke meat or fish with a charcoal grill. He has a Webber kettle-type grill, and a lot of hickory nut shells. Could he use the shells for smoking meat? Also, he wants recipes using hickory nuts and black walnuts. Elizabeth of Schuylkill County suggests listening to Alton Brown who hosts a television show called Good Eats on the Food Network. She writes that Brown did an excellent show on smoking foods in the fall. Information can be obtained from the Website www.foodtv.com. This information is fine for those who have access to the internet and cable television; however, as a reader recently pointed out, not all our subscribers do. If anyone has additional information, it would be appreciated.

RICHARD YEAGLEY
Machinist

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — In the last two weeks of March 1944, one of every 10 U.S. Army Air Force bombers sent to attack the German cities of Berlin and Nuremburg were shot down. Despite almost a year of incessant attacks by the British flying at night and the Americans sorting by day, German factories had actually managed to increase their production of Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs and were producing more fighters each month than the Luftwaffe was losing.

In those two awful weeks, the U.S. air forces in Europe lost a total of 168 aircraft carrying 1,680 highly trained pilots and airmen. Even if this were all-out war against the Nazi Reich, such losses threatened to stagger even the arsenal of democracy.

It is chilling to speculate what might have been, if such losses had continued and the Allies had not established superiority in the air by the time of the D-Day invasion just 10 weeks later. What made the difference in the air war over Europe in those few weeks? In a word — the P-51 Mustang.

Retired Lancaster County machinist Richard Yeagley has had a burning passion for the P-51 since he served in the U.S. Army, in Europe, at the end of the war. Yeagley describes himself as a well-seasoned tool and die maker, who has enjoyed the best of all worlds — being able to both design and build. He is retired from Kensey Nash Corp., Exton, where he designed and built small intravascular surgical instruments. Since childhood, he has been fascinated by anything mechanical, especially aircraft. In retirement he is fulfilling a lifetime dream — he has created a high precision machine shop in his home, and has built a working scale model of the famous aircraft engine, the Rolls-Royce Merlin, which powered the North American Aviation Co. P-51 Mustang to fame and glory during World War II.

Yeagley had long wanted to make a scale working model of an internal combustion engine, and his love for the Mustang led him to select the Merlin as his first subject.

"I didn't know what I was getting myself into," he said, laughing, as he recounts how he started the project in December 1993. Yeagley had learned to fly in 1973, and the age of 48, and had built a Christen Eagle, a light, aerobatic aircraft specially designed to be home-built.

Like most aircraft home-builders, Yeagley had become a member of the Experimental Aircraft Association, in Oshkosh, Wis. His first step was to contact the EAA and request information on the Merlin. The EAA sent him copies of pages from P-51 maintenance manuals used by the U.S. Army Air Corps in World War II and after. Next, he contacted Stallion 51, a company in Kissimmee, Fla. that specializes in restoring, maintaining, repairing and flying P-51 Mustangs.

"Those guys were great," Yeagley recalls. "They sent me a lot of stuff, and let me take a lot of pictures. They even gave me a ride in their TF-51 Mustang, Crazy Horse, which is one of the most beautiful Mustangs that ever existed." A TF-51 is dual-/dual-cockpit Mustang that was the final aircraft combat pilots trained in before being deployed to a theatre of operations.

Stallion 51 used Crazy Horse and two other TF-51 to conduct "orientation" rides, to train test pilots for the U.S. Navy Test Pilot School in Patuxent River, Md., and to train commercial airline flight crews in the recognizing and recovering from unusual attitudes and aircraft upsets that if not corrected in a split-second, could lead to a catastrophic loss of control of an airliner. Yeagley was also able to pore over an early Merlin at an automobile museum in Mechanicsburg maintained by the Rolls-Royce Owners Club. He also asked for and received information from the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C.

However, Yeagley never contacted Rolls-Royce to try and obtain actual blueprints for the Merlin. He explains that he had just as much fun designing and drawing each component to make a ⅛ scale model of the Merlin, as he did cutting and fabricating metal to actually make it.

It was the challenge of design that exhilarated him — "It has to make sense on paper before you make chips, or all you're going to make in the shop is chips," he notes. He estimates that approximately one-third of the thousands of hours he spent was in front of a drawing board, designing — and redesigning. "Once I got the crankcase made, I realized there was no turning back," Yeagley says.

The bore of a full size Merlin is 5.4 inches; Yeagley's model has a bore of .6875 inch. A full size Merlin had a displacement of 1,658 cubic inches; Yeagley's model displaces only 3.4 cubic inches. The entire model Merlin is about 11½ inches in length. Asked if he has thought about selling the plans, he snorts and declares that he would demand $150,000 for the plans, and he wouldn't sell the completed model Merlin for $1 million or more. "I've got the only scale Merlin plans, and the only scale Merlin in the world, and when I die, they'll still be the only ones in the world," he said emphatically.

"The Merlin absolutely was essential to winning the war," Yeagley replies to a question. "The Germans had excellent equipment and excellent aircraft, that was really tough to beat. All that changed when the Mustang came on the scene. When a Messerschmitt got on a Mustang's tail, the Mustang just went for the sky. It would just go up, and up, and up. The Messerschmitt would simply run out of up."

The Merlin achieved its first Missions often lasted as long as nine hours. Like any high-performance engine, the Merlin required a lot of maintenance. Valve lash had to be adjusted after every mission, and every 200 hours, or about once every three to four weeks, the 20 gallons of oil in each engine had to be changed. But, the Merlins rarely failed, and their ability to withstand abuse became legendary.

After the war, development of the Merlin was redirected for use in civilian transports, with the emphasis on reliability and serve life rather than absolute power.

Over its complete life cycle from the 1930s to 1950s, a total of 168,040 Merlins were built by Rolls-Royce from a relatively small company into a major contender in aviation propulsion. Today, there is a stained glass window at the Rolls-Royce jet-engine factory in Nightingale Road, Derby, England, with the inscription: "This window commemorates the pilots of the Royal Air Force who, in the Battle of Britain, turned the work of our hands into the salvation of our Country."

Occasionally, a worker or manager pauses in front of the window, and thinks about the thousands of Merlin engines produced, "the work of our hands," which helped win World War II and keep the world safe for democracy.

Richard Yeagley will be exhibiting his working scale model Merlin engine at the sixth annual Cabin Fever Expo, being held Jan. 26 and 27, in Lebanon, in the Lebanon Valley Exposition Center, 2120 Cornwall Road. It required nine years, thousands of hours to design, make, redesign and remake a miniature ⅛ scale Merlin.

The famous Rolls-Royce Merlin, which powered the American Fighter during WWII, continues to fascinate pilots, engineers, mechanics, and model collectors.

Anne Gilbert

Toys for Grownups

The giant talking, moving statues that enthrall visitors to Las Vegas and the robot maid who cleans the house were realities long before the 20th century.

In the writings of ancient times there are references to temple statues that moved, a wooden pigeon that could fly, and a brass man gifted with motion and speech.

Turning fantasy into fact actually began in the early third century B.C. By the 11th century, dolls with moving mechanisms were recorded in India. They danced, carried water, and picked up objects. Singing gold birds were written about in the "Arabian Nights" tales.

As far back as the 1600s, can be a few hundred dollars. Such was the case when a comic strip character, "The Yellow Kid" sold at a Skinner auction for $300. Unlike the early clockwork automatons this one performed with the aid of an electric motor ; licking an ice cream cone and then rubbing his stomach. However, late 19th century automatons that perform several functions with a clockwork mechanism have sold at auction for several thousand dollars.

In more recent times they were often used with a more humble purpose; to promote a product. When advertising, automaton figures come to auction prices mechanical dolls had become popular attractions at European traveling fairs. Some made in Germany at that time were so highly prized that they were given as a gift to King Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden.

Antique Detective

the name Jacques de Vaucanson that rates highest. Beginning in the early 18th century, Vaucanson created the most intricate automatons. One of his most famous pieces was a duck that quacked when corn was thrown in front of it, then, stretched its' neck and swallowed. The duck digested the corn by means of a chemical solution inside and finally "discharged it in biological fashion." It also flapped its' wings and played in water with its bill. Even more amazing it had to be wound only once.

Another masterpiece by Vaucanson was a figure that played a shepherd's pipe with one hand while beating a drum with the other.

Often the craft was carried out as a family business. The French Droz family is famous for two automatons. One figure, a writer, was said to have been able to write a short letter. The other, "the designer," could allegedly draw. It has yet to be discovered. it is known however that the Droz family created lifelike automatons for the King of Spain, including a dog guarding a basket of fruit. When the fruit was removed the dog barked.

When you consider that these mechanical objects were operated not only by clockwork but water, wind, or mercury they seem all the more fantastic.

Another famous automaton maker was Jean Maillardet(1748-1834). One of his unique pieces was a kneeling boy who wrote English and French sentences with pen and ink, and drew landscapes. Another of his documented automatons was a lady pianist who played 18 pieces of music. She first bowed to the audience , then her eyes looked at the musical score while her fingers went through playing motions on the keys.

By the 19th century famous doll makers such as Jumeau turned their talents to doll automatons. Some of these have sold for $8,000 or more at auction.

CLUES: The old, rarer and more intricate the automaton the higher the price. Original clothing and parts add to the value.

20th century advertising automatons still sell for a few hundred dollars. Most common and least expensive are the tiny singing birds, mass-produced over the years in Europe and popular as souvenirs. The least expensive come in brass cages. The most expensive are in gold cages decorated with precious stones.

A BETTER ALTERNATIVE

The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat. The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed. There's no need to load the furnace several times a day. The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal. UL Approved

SnowWolf Ultra Heavy Duty Skid Loader Plows

Trip Cutting Edge Design
The SnowWolf Ultra features a trip cutting edge design which allows full down pressure for incredible scraping ability in forward or backdragging situations. It eliminates "false tripping" from snow load and will only engage if you actually strike an immovable object.

Massive Construction
The SnowWolf Ultra is designed to take abuse from the largest skid loaders At approximately 100 pounds per foot of plowing width, you know the Ultra means business.

Food for Thought
Did you know that a modern skid loader with a high speed transmission and a SnowWolf Ultra will outplow a pickup truck under most plowing conditions? A cleaner job, closer to the obstacles (without worrying about your fenders), and more acres plowed in the same amount of time!

Pioneer Offers Corn Hybrid-Herbicide Management Guide To Producers

DES MOINES, Iowa — A unique corn herbicide management guide from Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., can help producers as they select corn herbicides for their weed control programs next season. The guide can be found on-line at: http://www.pioneer.com/agronomy/herbicide_guide.htm or by contacting your local Pioneer representative.

The Pioneer Corn Hybrid-Herbicide Management Guide rates the herbicide/hybrid interaction of more than 100 Pioneer® brand hybrids to four major herbicide families. The guide has been available to growers since 1997. Overall, Pioneer's research results show most hybrids have adequate tolerance to the herbicide families tested.

"Pioneer has been conducting herbicide-by-hybrid research for more than 20 years," says Paul Gaspar, Pioneer research manager in Mankato, Minn. "These guides are the result of intensive rating of herbicide tolerance which began in 1994. The guides are designed to provide our customers with the information they will need to choose the right products and receive the maximum return from our hybrid corn products."

Gaspar points out that Pioneer's research generally shows the primary reason for crop response to herbicides is due to environmental stress conditions the herbicide and hybrid encounter, rather than the individual tolerance of the hybrid. However, with the introduction of many new herbicides, some interactions have been identified.

The four major, most commonly used herbicide families: amides (chloracetamides), isoxazole (pigment inhibitor), benzoic acids or phenoxy-carboxylic acids (auxins) and sulfonylureas are discussed in detail in the guide.

Each herbicide family received one of four ratings with each Pioneer brand hybrid based upon research trials and field observations. The ratings are:

- Adequate tolerance: The herbicide-hybrid combination has acceptable tolerance to the herbicide. Therefore, under normal growing conditions, injury is unlikely to occur when label directions are followed.
- Requires careful management: This herbicide-hybrid combination may exhibit crop injury in challenging environments, such as heavy rainfall during seed germination or seedling emergence, sandy soils low in organic matter, high pH soils, or during periods of excessively cold, hot, dry or wet weather. Thus, careful management is warranted to avoid herbicide injury. The potential of herbicide-by-hybrid interaction may also be impacted by the labeled herbicide rate used and the method or timing of application. The management needed to reduce injury potential depends on the specific herbicide family.
- Crop response warning: Field observations and research indicate crop injury has occurred with this herbicide-hybrid combination.

Caterpillar And Agco Reach Agreement On Next Generation Of Challenger® Tractors

PEORIA, Ill. and DULUTH, Ga. — Caterpillar, Inc. (NYSE: Cat) and Agco (NYSE: AG) have signed an agreement for Agco, a Georgia-based agricultural equipment manufacturer and distributor, to acquire the design, assembly and worldwide marketing of the new MT Series of Caterpillar's Challenger® high-tech farm tractors.

"Caterpillar has a long history of designing and producing rugged, reliable agricultural machines, and this industry continues to represent an important growth opportunity for us," said Robert Macier, Caterpillar vice president with responsibility for the company's Diversified Products Division. "This agreement enables us to focus our efforts on those areas where we can add the highest value — engines, drivetrains, electronics and technology development — while Agco provides its expertise in the assembly and marketing of agricultural products. It also offers Caterpillar the opportunity to provide additional engines and other components to Agco — one of the leading global suppliers of agricultural equipment."

John Shumejda, president and CEO of Agco said, "This new and innovative tractor technology gives Agco a leading entry into high-technology farming and large-acreage farming market segments. In addition, Agco will provide Caterpillar dealers with additional products that will broaden their equipment offerings and enhance their competitive position in the agricultural equipment market."

Agco is a multiple-brand producer with a full agricultural product line that Agco sells throughout the world under brands that include Massey Ferguson, Hesston, Gleaner and Fendt.

Under the agreement, Macier and Shumejda said, Agco will immediately begin assembly of four models of the newly announced MT700 series of Challenger tractors. It also calls for Caterpillar to be a long-term supplier of high-horsepower (220-500 hp) diesel engines, drivetrains, and other major components, including the patented Mobil-trac™ system, with its rubber tracks that enable more efficient use of engine power with less soil compaction. This agreement also includes future MT Series tractors.

Agco will acquire the MT Series product design, and will continue to market the tractors through Caterpillar dealers worldwide, as well as through a selected network of Agco dealers. Caterpillar will provide technical support to Agco on track technology and will maintain customer support services for all Challenger tractors produced before the sale of the MT Series to Agco.

Ohio's Wheat Struggling Under Wet Weather, Diseases

WOOSTER, Ohio - Prolonged heavy rains during winter wheat planting have resulted in severe stand establishment problems throughout parts of Ohio, which may affect overall yields come next season's harvest.

Pat Lipps, an Ohio State University plant pathologist for the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC), said saturated soils created ideal conditions for fungi to attack and kill germinating seeds, heavily damaging wheat fields or, in some cases, wiping out entire fields.

"We received very heavy rains during the second and third weeks in October, which was right after the major acreage of wheat was planted. Some parts of the state received six to eight inches of rain during a one-week period," said Lipps. "When you get saturated soils from a deluge of rain like that, it's very difficult for any crop to germinate and become established."

Northwest Ohio has been hardest hit with many farmers having to replant five to six weeks beyond the Hessian fly free date or being forced to plant other crops.

"I can say that in the 20 something years that I've been here, it's the worst looking wheat crop I've seen in terms of stand establishment. I've never seen anything this severe or this widespread," said Lipps. "We like our wheat to be planted on time so that it produces three to four tillers before winter dormancy, and our evaluations of fields so far indicate that we are lucky to have one or maybe two tillers. That's about half of what we need to produce the 80-90 bushel yields we are used to."

Lipps said that the poor germination problems and subsequent late replanting of many fields are raising concerns whether the crop will survive through winter and produce an economically viable crop next spring.

"Research has shown that fields planted right after the Hessian fly safe date perform much better than late planted fields. Some farmers are still trying to plant right now, which is just way too late to expect to produce a viable crop next year," said Lipps. "The thing that concerns us is the area hardest hit contains the major wheat growing counties in the state, producing more acreage of winter wheat than any of the other counties in Ohio."

Counties in Northwest Ohio affected by wheat stand establishment problems include Putnam, Paulding, Van Wert, Allen, Hancock, Henry, Defiance, Wood, and parts of Mercer, Shelby and Auglaize. Ohio ranks seventh overall among all winter wheat-producing states in the United States and produces some of the highest quality soft red winter wheat sought after by millers and bakers.

Though little can be done now to remedy the situation, Lipps recommends that farmers assess their fields for yield potential next spring by counting the number of plants per square foot. "If farmers determine they have 15 plants or more per square foot, they can probably save those fields and go for a near normal yield," he said. "The economics of the situation, however, might drive some farmers to plant soybeans or corn depending on what they'll see next spring."

CNH Announces ABS Transaction

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — CNH Capital, the financial services arm of CNH Global N.V. (NYSE:CNH), has announced a $1.0 billion asset-backed securitization by CNH Capital Receivables Inc.

The securities are backed by U.S. agricultural and construction equipment retail receivables contracts originated through the company's dealership. CNH Capital will apply the proceeds from the securitization to repay outstanding debt.

Lead manager for the transaction is Salomon Smith Barney. Co-managers are: Bank of America Securities LLC, Credit Suisse First Boston, Deutsche Bank Alex Brown, J.P. Morgan, and SG Cowen.

Broadcast Spreaders Available From Land Pride

SALINA, Kan. — Land Pride Broadcast Spreaders feature an all steel frame, frontal splash-plate, adjustable spinner vanes, agitator and tow hook. Application rates range from 44 pounds to 890 pounds per acre with available hopper capacities of 350 pounds, 563 pounds or 673 pounds.

The 14 gauge, one-piece steel hopper is seamless for accurate and consistent emptying. Delivery is adjustable to spread on the left, right or with full width of 54 feet covering large areas in one pass. An optional vinyl cap with elastic and buckles keeps wind and rain out, and material in.

Yetter 2959/2967 Cuts Costs, Boosts Yield Potential

COLCHESTER, Ill. — The new 2959/2967 combination injection system/residue manager allows farmers to make the most of reduced tillage operations, according to the Yetter Manufacturing Company. It does this by combining residue clearance, planting and fertilizer injection into one operation. Labor, fuel and equipment costs are proportionately smaller. The combination unit can be used on most popular planters.

According to Don Bunnell, research and development specialist for Yetter, the 2967's precise residue clearance operation allows for consistent seed placement while reducing the hair-pinning that can cut into yields. Its wide pivot bearing surfaces deliver strength and durability, he says, and he notes that the arm is constructed of formed square steel tubing with replaceable pivot bushings.

The standard Yetter QuikAdjust allows the residue manager to either float on the surface or maintain a specific depth setting via a pin-locking mechanism.

Pointing to the 2959 injection system part of the combination, Bunnell explains how it further increases efficiency. "Even as the 2967 clears the residue," he notes, "the injection system's 16-inch blade cuts a slot two inches off the row and injects liquid fertilizer, giving crops a faster start. So you're not only saving time and money, you're maximizing your yield potential."

Waterbeds for Cows

ALANTA
A member of the LimPoly group of companies Patent Pending

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — To James Hershey, farming has been a lifelong pursuit — and has provided lifelong learning opportunities.

Hershey is the winner of the no-till, nonirrigated division of 2000's state shelled grain class with 216.4 bushels per acre and a plant population of 29,272 per acre using Pioneer 33A14.

A four-year entrant in both corn and soybean divisions in both the state and national contests, he actually has several wins behind his name. A soybean yield of 80 bushels per acre netted him top honors in the soybean contest two years ago.

Additionally, he was third in the state in 1997 for the corn contest, and last year third in the state for the national corn contest. He plans to continue to enter future competitions.

Farming has always been the career choice for Hershey and his wife, Shirley. Hershey grew up in New Holland and farmed on his parents' operation for a year before he moved to the Elizabethtown farm, where Shirley grew up, in 1977. Her father, Raymond Miller, continues to help out with the fieldwork.

The couple also owns an

LOCK HAVEN (Clinton Co.) — While the possibility of ethanol production from local corn is being studied by some Pennsylvania ag and economic development leaders, one manufacturer here is making furnaces that convert shelled corn into heat.

Producing 100,000 British Thermal Units (BTUs) per hour, the shelled corn furnaces provide a clean, inexpensive alternative to traditional fuels such as oil and coal, according to Pete Spangler of LMF Manufacturing in Lock Haven.

This summer the family weathered a fire which burnt a chicken house to the ground. In only seven weeks, however, two single-story houses replaced the original house, according to Hershey. The broilers and hogs are produced under contract.

If livestock and his own acres were not enough to keep Hershey occupied, he does custom farming, including planting and combining, for other producers. The custom combining is the biggest sector, said Hershey, who did over 1,000 acres this season. To help out, Shirley takes care of the chickens during the day. She, however, is busy operating her own kennel on the farm.

After dairying for 20 years, he sold the dairy, put up a chicken house, and six years ago bought his neighbor's farm to build a 3,400-hog finishing unit.

The fields, however, are where Hershey most enjoys spending his time. "I like working in the field and watching crops grow to maturity and to be able to harvest it. There are different challenges as far as new corn genetics or herbicide programs available to see how they might or might not work in my program."

Management Techniques

"Placing seed at the proper depth is something that is overlooked a lot. It really does make a difference on how the seed germinates," Hershey said. Hershey plants the seeds at least an inch and a half deep. A seed protectant, a fungicide, accompanies each seed at planting.

"It helps the roots develop — it seems like the roots grow too much on top of the ground if it's planted too shallow."

Hershey does not use any commercial fertilizer. Although he sells the broiler manure he uses the hog manure for crop acres. "It's easier to handle and nutrient-wise, it seems to fit our nutrient management plan better," he said.

He applies 7,000-10,000 gallons of liquid hog manure per acre per year. Using the liquid hog manure amounts to a savings of $100-$150 per acre, he calculates, of fertilizer costs.

Besides the fertilizer he sidedresses anhydrous ammonia when the corn is 16-24 inches tall. "A boost of nitrogen at that stage has been working well in my program," he said.

Although management of fertilizer and tilling practices are essential to a good crop, the moisture factor is also important. "I couldn't obtain high yields without the Lord sending the rain," he said.

Hershey has used 90 percent Pioneer seed since he started farming. This time he used Pioneer 33A14 seed for his winning crop. He used the strain again this year, along with different strains that he is experimenting with or has observed promising results in last year. Another strain, in fact, had out-yielded the winning lot but contest lots have to be chosen in the summer.

Tillage practices are another management key, said Hershey. Soil compaction decreases the chance of a healthy, high-yielding crop. Producers should avoid "working over the ground before it's fit to be on," he said. "It's key to yields. I'm very particular about that. Every year is different as far as when the soil is ready. The calendar might say it's time to be planting, but if it's to wet or too cold, I don't feel it's an advantage to be out there too early."

Seventy-five percent of the corn is no-tilled, with the remaining 25 percent of the fields minimum tilled. "Especially this past year, when we were hit pretty hard with the drought this season, the no-till crops really had an edge," he said.

Hershey no-tills into soybean stubble, "which I've found works with my operation," he said. The barley and wheat fields are tilled.

Wintertime finds Hershey concentrating on hauling grain to the mill or selling the hay and straw he harvests off of 20 acres. The winter months also provide time to repair equipment and plan for spring planting.

An Industry In Motion

Agriculture has proven to be a quickly-changing business — a challenge that he has met with by continuing his own education. "I've learned a lot by attending agricultural meetings and by trial and error," he said.

A corn and soybean conference he attended two years ago in Albuquerque has also expanded his knowledge about farming. "I felt it was very worthwhile," he said. "It was two days packed with seminars. I got to meet other farmers from throughout the U.S. and came away from there with new ideas and new gusto to go home and do a better job with planting and marketing practices. That year they really challenged farmers to be businessmen in marketing crops."

Although his father, Eby Hershey, gave him valuable lessons about farming growing up, farming has changed, according to Hershey. "Technology and genetically-altered seed has put a different twist on agriculture," he said.

In addition, believes Hershey, marketing has become paramount to producers. "You almost have to be a businessman — to be market smart," he said. "I have a DTN screen that I check every day." He sells his gain on contract several times throughout the year.

The couple has three children: Marc, a senior at Elizabethtown College; Erica, 21, who is hoping to soon enter the graphic design field; and Alicia, a freshman at Temple University. Marc, who is studying accounting, has taken over the farm's bookkeeping for several years now.

Hershey is also involved in the Manheim Young Farmers group and the Elizabethtown Brethren in Christ church.

Let Shelled Corn Heat Your Home

Spangler's company has been making the furnaces since last fall, after receiving a startup grant from West Penn Power Sustainable Energy Fund, Inc.

Managed by Penn State, the energy fund provides grant funding and low-income financing to companies pursuing renewable energy technologies such as biofuels and windpower, according to Joel Morrison of Penn State's College of Earth and Mineral Sciences.

LMF received "royalty financing," from the fund, meaning that the company must pay back a specified amount on each stove it sells.

Morrison said that corn furnaces and stoves should especially "make sense for the average farmer" who has ready access to shelled corn.

Spangler said he received manufacturing rights for the corn furnace from Big M, an Illinois-based company who has been making them since the 1980s.

LMF is capable of manufacturing two to two and a half corn furnaces per day. According to Spangler, sales are increasing, with the company supplying eight dealers in several states, including Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Ohio.

"We've gotten a whole lot of phone calls," he said

The furnaces are going for about $3,000 on the retail market, Spangler said.

Features of the stove include a 14-bushel storage bin, cast-iron fire pot, corn metering auger, fan control, and thermostat relay.

According to LMF literature, induced air flow into the combustion chamber creates 99 percent burning efficiency in the furnace, with the corn leaving no creosote residue.

An energy and cost analysis released by Spangler shows that shelled corn provides 9,000 BTUs per pound, compared to 13,000 BTUs per pound of coal. Based on $3/bushel corn and $140/ton coal prices, the total cost of producing 18,000,000 BTUs of energy (provided by one ton of corn) is $108 for corn versus $98 for coal.

However, at $2.50 per bushel of corn, the cost of the same amount of heat is $90 when burning corn, according to the analysis.

"The price is comparable to coal and is a whole lot cleaner and safer," Spangler said.

Natural gas, fuel oil, and L.P. gas check in at $90, $110, and $158 in producing 18,000,000 BTUs, based on prices of $.50/cubic foot, $.85/gallon, and $.80/gallon, respectively, in the analysis provided by Spangler.

In its outlet store, LMF also offers corn stoves — smaller units producing 30,000 and 40,000 BTUs per hour. The stoves are designed more for "supplemental" heating than the larger furnace, Spangler said.

Share Yield Monitor Data With Experts

NORCROSS, Ga. — The tools of precision farming have helped growers collect more data than ever before on their crops and soils. Remote sensing, topography and electrical conductivity mapping, and soil test grids supply so much data that computerized geographic information systems have become a necessity. But in many cases, it's not easy to convert these data into useful information for management decisions.

To manage based on collected data, the factors that control yield and quality must be found. The factors that control crop variations within the field are not the same as those controlling variations from one year to the next or those from one field to another. In fact, variations within your field likely differ from those within your neighbor's field.

Yield-limiting factors interact with each other. A principle of limiting nutrients is that change in supply of one nutrient changes the optimum level of the others. As yields increase, the critical minimum for most inputs increases. But at the same time, critical maximum levels may decrease, narrowing the optimum range. Finding that optimum range is an important objective of exploring the data obtained from precision farming.

Recent site-specific research provided an example of this narrowing of the optimum range. In Quebec, variable rate application of phosphorus improved corn yields above either a check or a uniformly fertilized treatment...even though fertilizing uniformly produced no more yield than the check. The same study also found that soil test phosphorus declined rapidly in the absence of fertilizer inputs, while its spatial variability increased.

The analysis of spatial data requires a team. It's a new topic even for crop and soil scientists. The team needs to include a local crop adviser or agronomist, technicians trained in geographic data handling and mapping, specialists in soil fertility and plant nutrition, and experts in spatial statistics. Don't discount your own resource of practical and historical knowledge as a grower, but keep in mind that data shared with experts are more likely to improve management.

Teamwork on variable rate nitrogen has produced results. In Ontario, on-farm experiments involving strips of varying nitrogen rates have related crop response to local soil properties. We have found that the soil nitrate test usefully identifies variations from year to year in the supply of nitrogen from fall-applied manure. But it has been costly to sample for the spatial pattern of nitrate. In addition, its spatial pattern often doesn't follow the pattern of crop response. Some fields have shown a hint of interaction with other factors. For example, where soil test potassium is high, crops can use more nitrogen. In other fields, nitrogen needs have related better to cation exchange capacity or soil electrical conductivity.

Experience so far shows that each field is unique. Perhaps when the work progresses, common factors will be found that enable us to transfer relationships discovered in one field to another. But for now, unless we continue to experiment, the value of precision farming will not be realized.

You have valuable data. Share it with the experts to reap the benefits of its value. For more information, contact Dr. Tom Bruulsema, Eastern Canada and Northeast U.S. Director, PPI, 18 Maplewood Drive, Guelph, Ontario N1G 1L8, Canada, (519) 821-5519 or e-mail: tbruulsema@ppi-ppic.org.

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

Old Corn Disease Causing New Concerns In Ohio

WOOSTER, Ohio — An old corn disease has re-emerged in Ohio fields, raising concerns of potential problems it may cause if not effectively controlled.

Northern corn leaf blight, a fungal disease that can cause significant yield losses under wet weather conditions, has been found in cornfields throughout southern Ohio this season. The disease was last seen in Ohio during the early 1990s.

Pat Lipps, an Ohio State University plant pathologist, said the disease could potentially cause serious problems and should be monitored closely. "The cases we've been finding in Ohio are not severe enough to be a major epidemic, but it's enough to give us a warning sign — that we need to pay attention to this," said Lipps.

Plant pathologists speculate the disease has returned due to the planting of corn hybrids that lack resistance. "The best way to control the disease is through resistance. It's cheap and effective. The farmer just needs to take the time to work with seed companies in choosing a resistant hybrid," said Lipps. "There are plenty of hybrids available with good resistance."

Northern corn leaf blight is more common in fields throughout southern Ohio due to the ample rainfall the region received throughout the growing season. Lipps said a number of fields with higher disease levels are experiencing 10 percent to 20 percent yield losses.

The telltale sign of northern corn leaf blight is one- to six-inch long cigar-shaped gray-green to tan-colored lesions on the lower leaves. As the disease develops, the lesions spread to all leafy structures, including the husks. The lesions may become so numerous that the leaves are eventually destroyed causing major reductions in yield due to lack of carbohydrates available to fill the grain. Yield losses can reach as high as 30 percent to 50 percent if the disease establishes itself before tasseling.

Two types of resistant hybrids are available to farmers to control northern corn leaf blight: partial resistant hybrids, which protect against all four of the known races of the fungus, and race-specific resistant hybrids, which protect against a specific race. Partial resistant hybrids are the most common. A one-to two-year rotation away from corn and destruction of old corn residues by tillage may be helpful in controlling the disease if susceptible hybrids must be grown.

For more information on northern corn leaf blight, log on to Ohio State Extension's Ohio Field Crop Disease at http://www.oardc.ohiostate.edu/ohiofieldcropdisease. Ohio State's Ohioline at http://ohioline.osu.edu also contains information about the disease and how to choose effective hybrids.

More Lessons From An Interesting Year

Greg Roth
Associate Professor

Last year is in the history books now but it will go down as another interesting one for many corn producers. Perhaps the one thing that I remember most was the unusually dry spring and fall that both had dramatic impacts on corn management. The crop also seemed to yield reasonably well despite the lack of moisture in some areas.

The dry spring allowed for a rapid planting season with many folks finishing corn planting by the first week of May. According to USDA figures, 68 percent of the Pennsylvania crop had been planted by May 13, up from an average of 41 percent. The dry soil conditions contributed to less than ideal emergence in some fields and some concerns about weed control in others. In our own trials, we paid careful attention to our planting depth and got reasonable stands, especially where we no-tilled. Where corn was planted shallow in tilled ground many folks reported some cases of severe delayed emergence. I was also impressed with the level of weed control we did get from our premergence herbicide programs despite the dry season. The big lesson — plant corn 1.5 to 2.0 inches deep, not any shallower, and perhaps a bit deeper if the soil is warm and dry.

The dry summer was a mixed blessing for corn producers. In some areas disease pressure was low and this helped yields. But for most fields suffered some drought stress. Yields dropped statewide to 94 bushels per acre down from 127 last year. That means we produced about 40 million bushels less corn this year than last.

The dry conditions in late summer also resulted in a drier than normal silage crop that dried down rapidly once it got to about 60 percent moisture. The lesson here — measure silage moisture — don't guess and plan accordingly.

On the plus side the grain crop dried down rapidly and the soil was dry at harvest in most places. This resulted in record low grain moistures, good test weights and not much potential for soil compaction during harvest. Much corn was harvested and stored without being dried. Harvest was also completed in a very timely fashion. By the 4th of November USDA estimated that 74 percent of the Pennsylvania crop had been harvested compared to a five-year average of 55 percent. Don't count on many more harvest years like this in your career.

One concern an early fall might generate is that corn growers now might have some tendency to shift to later maturing hybrids. Then, in a more normal year, hybrids won't dry down well and test weights suffer. I suspect this won't be a big problem — in fact I see more and more producers relying more on hybrids that are on the early side of their maturity zone. The reason seems to be that many of these early hybrids are yielding close to or better than the full season hybrids, they allow an earlier start to harvest and drying costs are greatly reduced. Data from our hybrid test reports in this issue of Corn Talk suggest that there are high yielding early (low moisture) hybrids with good test weight available in each maturity zone.

The other issue that impressed me, and many producers, was how well the crop yielded given the rainfall in some areas. I attribute this to the early planting, drought stress tolerance of the hybrids we are using now and the adoption of no-till and conservation tillage by some producers. Because of these advances in genetics and crop management, corn yields have been increasing in our state by about 1.1 bushel per acre per year in our state during the last 40 years.

Hopefully in 2002 yields should improve again. It will be an even numbered year, which seems to help with rainfall for some reason, and there should be a few factors like reduced compaction, reduced N leaching losses and fall tillage that should have positive effects on yields as well.

Corn Growers Praise President Bush For Pro-Ethanol National Energy Plan

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President George W. Bush, in remarks made to Farm Journal's sixth annual forum in Washington, D.C., emphasized the importance of ethanol to national security, the environment, and the farm economy.

After praising farmers for representing and preserving the values of the U.S., the president gave a strong endorsement of renewable fuels and encouraged the Senate to pass a national energy bill.

During the pro-ethanol speech, President Bush stated, "I also want to improve our homeland security and our economy by having a national energy plan. I want to thank the Farm Journal Forum for emphasizing the importance of ethanol and biofuels. These fuels are gentle on the environment. They are fuels that can be renewed year after year, and fuels that can expand our farm economy. These fuels are made right here in America, so they can't be threatened by any foreign power."

President Bush continually reiterated his support for ethanol, adding, 'Ethanol and biofuels are fuels of the future for this country. Since the beginning of my administration, I have strongly supported ethanol and biofuels. And the energy plan I sent to Congress back in the spring supports biofuels."

"President Bush was right on target in his remarks today," said Boyd Smith, a York, Neb., corn farmer and chairman of the National Corn Growers Association Ethanol Marketing Committee. "The president echoed NCGA's long standing position that renewable fuels — like ethanol — promote the national interest, and are good for both the environment and the economy, while enhancing our national security."

Noting that one of NCGA's top priorities is inclusion of a Renewable Fuels Standard in energy legislation, Smith went on to say, "With support like this from the president we are hopeful we will see legislation expanding the role of renewable fuels in our national energy policy."

It is estimated that in 2001, ethanol production will use 675 million bushels of corn, producing nearly 1.8 billion gallons of the renewable fuel.

2001 Pa. Commercial Hybrid Test Reports

How to Use This Report

This report provides independent and unbiased information for the evaluation of commercial corn hybrids available in Pennsylvania It should be used to supplement other sources of information, such as seed industry performance tests, other independent testing data, and on-farm performance records when making hybrid selection decisions.

The first factor to consider when using this report is hybrid maturity. The hybrids listed in Tables 1 and 3 are ranked in ascending order by grain moisture with the earliest hybrids (lowest grain moisture) at the top Silage hybrids (Table 4) are ranked by whole-plant moisture at the time of harvest. In Table 2, hybrids are listed alphabetically. Grain or silage moisture is a good indicator of hybrid maturity; those with lower moisture are generally adapted to shorter season environments. Identify hybrids in the list that you know are adapted to your area, and then evaluate new hybrids that have similar moisture contents. Selecting hybrids based on yield alone may result in a hybrid that is too late for your farm. Note that there is considerable range among maturity in hybrids entered in each zone. Once you have identified the appropriate hybrid maturity range, compare the yields of the hybrids that have been evaluated.

Yield performance is variable across locations and is best predicted by using data averaged over multiple locations, so the mean yield over all sites is the best guide to hybrid performance. Individual location hybrid means (Table 2) can help to assess how consistent, or stable, the hybrid was across locations. For example, some hybrids may do well at high-yielding sites but may not do well at low-yielding sites. We DO NOT recommend using data from a single site, even if it is close to your farm, to make hybrid selection choices.

Once you have identified some prospective hybrids, consider their standability from the erect plants column as well as any disease-rating data that may have been collected. It also is important to check with a seed company representative about other characteristics of the hybrid that may be important for your operation

Once you have gone through this process, you should be able to select hybrids that have above-average performance. This is an important part of profitable corn production, since, as these reports demonstrate, there is a wide range in the performance of corn hybrids.

Further, we recommend that you evaluate selected hybrids on your farm under your growing conditions and practices. This is the best way to make a final determination of the proper hybrids for your operation.

Tests of commercially available corn hybrids are conducted annually at several locations in each of the four maturity zones in Pennsylvania to provide farmers, seed producers, cooperative extension agents, and other interested persons with information about hybrid performance This report includes both the grain and silage results from the 2001 season

Table 1 contains the combined results for all locations harvested in this zone Table 2 contains the yield data generated at each location. We believe that the statewide performance averages found in Table 1 are most important to consider when making a final decision about variety capabilities, since they represent a wide variety of growing, soil, and management conditions A two-year summary of results for hybrids tested in both 2000 and 2001 growing seasons is given in Table 3 The results for hybrids entered in the silage performance test are reported in Table 4

Procedures

This testing program was available to any producer of hybrid seed corn. For the grain tests, hybrids were planted in paired-row plots equal to 1/500 of an acre. Planting was done with a vacuum precision planter, which minimized the number of plants needed to be removed to obtain a final population of 26,000 plants per acre. The planter was set to drop 30 kernels per row. When the corn was 12 to 18 inches tall, extra plants, primarily doubles and end-plants, were removed to reach to final population. For silage plots, hybrids were planted, as above, in single-row plots equal to 1/1000 acre. A final population of 28,000 plants per acre was obtained by dropping 32 kernels per row and removing extra plants as previously described. All grain entries were replicated three times in each test while silage entries were replicated four times. Cooperators and planting and harvesting dates are shown in Table 5.

Grain-test plots were harvested with a self-propelled combine equipped with electronic instrumentation for determining weight, moisture, and bushel weight (sometimes called test weight). Silage plots were harvested with a forage harvester. Grain yields are reported as bushels per acre, while grain moisture and erect plants are reported as percentages. Bushel weight is reported as pounds per bushel. Shelled grain yields were standardized at 15.5 percent grain moisture. Silage results are reported as actual field yield in tons per acre, calculated on the basis of 65 percent moisture, tons of dry matter per acre, and moisture content at harvest. Disease ratings were based on a scale of 0.5 to 5.0, progressing from little or no disease to premature death.

Growing conditions

Planting at all locations in this zone was completed on May 15. Planting conditions were excellent at all locations. Moisture and temperature stresses occurred at most locations with the Clarion County site most severely affected. The dry conditions that occurred following planting resulted in delayed germination and poor plant growth early in the season. This led to a late-maturing crop that was, in all likelihood, killed by frost before maturity. At the time of harvest, average grain moisture was 5–9% higher than at other locations, and yield was 55 bushels per acre less than the average of the four other locations that were harvested. Consequently, the data from Clarion County are not reported here. The plot in Crawford County was severely damaged by geese and not harvested. As an aid to interpreting the data, we are providing growing degree days (GDD) from the date of planting to the date of harvest or through October 8, whichever occurred first. The data in Table 5 show that there were 123–154 more growing degree days for the grain tests in 2001 compared to the 30-year average.

gray leaf spot (GLS), (from natural inoculum) was prevalent in the surrounding area, very little GLS occurred in this plot. However, NLB developed to high levels on several of the entries and disease ratings were made on September 6 for NLB only. Stalk rot, bird damage, and animal damage were not a problem at any location other than at the Crawford County site mentioned above.

Interpretation of results

Least significant difference (LSD) is the tool used to determine if two average values are actually different statistically. The difference between two hybrids must exceed the LSD value to be considered significantly different. Example for yield: LSD = 8.1 Bu/A; Hybrid X = 120.0 Bu/A; Hybrid Y = 105.0 Bu/A; 120.0 – 105.0 = 15.0 Bu/A difference. Since the difference between Hybrid X and Y (15.0 Bu/A), exceeded the LSD (8.1 Bu/A), Hybrid X was higher yielding due to hybrid superiority and not simply as a result of uncontrolled environmental factors.

Results of the tests for short-season, early medium-season, late medium-season, and late-season hybrids are available as separate reports from county offices of Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Members of the county-based extension staff assisted in conducting these tests. Their efforts were essential to the successful completion of the trials and were greatly appreciated.

NCGA Urges Farmers To Tell Congress:

Pass TPA

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Trade Promotion Authority (TPA), or "Fast Track" as it was previously called, has made frequent appearances in the headlines lately.

The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has been a staunch proponent of TPA and is encouraging producers to tell Congress to give this international marketing tool to President George W. Bush.

TPA's advocates have discussed the need to grant TPA powers to the president this year, because the United States has been at a competitive disadvantage in trade talks since these powers expired in 1994. For example, U.S. growth in agricultural exports — such as the corn and tractor in the background — are hampered by high tariffs on U.S. products, which greatly reduce American access to foreign markets.

"There are more than 130 preferential trade and investments agreements in the world today," he said, "and due to lack of trade authority, the United States is only party to two.

"For example," Hume continued, "the European Union (EU) has free trade agreements set up with 27 different countries, 20 of which were set up within the last 10 years. As of right now, the EU is also working on 15 new accords. That's why it is so important for growers to contact their elected leaders and tell them they support TPA. We cannot continue to be left behind on the world stage."

NCGA urges corn growers and other U.S. trade supporters to contact their elected officials supporting support of TPA. To contact your senator and representatives, click on the Action Alert on the NCGA Website home page, www.ncga.com. More information on NCGA's stance on TPA and other trade issues is available on the NCGA Website at http://www.ncga.com/trade/main/index.html.

Join The Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association Today

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Joining the Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association (PCGA) is easier than ever. A one-year membership is just $30. You you can join online at https://gims.ncga.com/MEMBERNEW/Default.asp or simply fill out the membership form and send to our address.

PCGA is continuing the Membership Incentive Program (MIP) this year. The theme of the program is "Try Something New."

Take this opportunity to experiment when you choose your free bag of seed corn. This seed corn company sponsored program entitles any PCGA/NCGA corn grower, who plants at least five acres of corn with a 3-year new or renewed membership, to a free standard size bag of seed.

To participate, simply complete the membership form indicating the brand of seed corn you would like to try, along with your check for the 3-year membership. You will then receive a certificate for a free bag of seed from the sponsoring company of your choice, along with your membership card from NCGA.

In consultation with the local seed corn dealer, you make the ultimate decision about which hybrid you will receive from the company you have selected. PCGA will send the names and addresses by brand chosen to the appropriate seed corn company's statewide contact person and they will contact you.

In addition, you'll be joining thousands of other growers across the country who are showing their support for the corn industry. Locally, you'll be supporting PCGA's activities such as Corn Talk, our corn or crops conference, and local corn promotion activities.

Membership Program Awards Prizes For Recruiters

Now you can help the PCGA get new members and win some valuable prizes.

The PCGA is participating in a new membership program sponsored by NCGA and Syngenta to reward folks who recruit members for our association. To qualify, you need to recruit five new members in one of the next three months.

Prizes will be awarded to the top recruiters who have recruited a minimum of five new members in Pennsylvania for each month. In January, the prize will be a Palm Pilot. In February, the prize will be a $300 gift certificate to Sears. In March, the prize will be a gourmet ham plus a $100 gift certificate for groceries at a local supermarket.

To participate, make copies of the PCGA membership form in Corn Talk. Ask folks to complete the membership form and put your name on the Recruiter line on the bottom, and then send the form to the PCGA office. Or they can join online (https://gims.ncga.com/MEMBERNEW/Default.asp) and enter your name in the appropriate line on the application. We'll keep a record of the awards and send the prize to the qualifying recruiter at the end of the month.

Corn Growers Say Farmers Are Best Judges Of Biotech Corn Effectiveness

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) rejects the conclusion of an analysis released by Benbrook Consulting Services claiming that corn developed with Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) has hurt rather than helped U.S. farm income.

Economics rule in corn production and U.S. growers wouldn't use a technology that doesn't give a positive return on investment, noted Leon Corzine, Assumption, Ill., farmer and chairman of the NCGA Biotech Working Group.

"U.S. corn producers are very attuned to costs and revenues and the bottom line. About 18 percent of corn farmers in the U.S. chose to plant Bt corn this past year. It is ridiculous and downright insulting to assume that we would make that decision without having clearly weighed the costs and benefits," said Corzine.

NCGA has long stated that biotech hybrids are one tool that corn producers have at their disposal, Corzine continued. "Individual farmers decide whether it makes sense in their operations," he explained. "It is not appropriate nor effective in all corn production situations."

NCGA's Know Before You Grow program available at NCGA's Website, www.ncga.com, helps farmers decide whether to use biotech hybrids, he pointed out. And, NCGA supports the Insect Resistance Management (IRM) program to ensure that Bt hybrids will retain their effectiveness in protecting corn from insects.

Corzine said much more credible studies of Bt corn show that it is very effective in areas of high corn borer population. Studies have shown that Bt hybrids offer yield enhancement, a reduction in mycotoxin levels and a reduction in the use of pesticides.

One recent example of such research comes from a group of 22 scientists from USDA and Midwestern land grant universities who made the following statement in response to similar criticisms of Bt corn: "The scientific community has examined the risks and benefits of Bt plants more than any other novel agricultural technology developed over the past two decades, as demonstrated by the vast body of literature, scientific discussions, and numerous public meetings facilitated by the EPA, the USDA, and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration on this subject. We find the evidence to date supports the appropriate use of Bt corn as one component in the economically and ecologically sound management of lepidopteran corn pests."

The report by Benbrook is part of a series published by the Institute for Agriculture and Trade Policy (IATP) and the Genetically Engineered Food Alert on issues related to biotechnology. Rick Tolman, NCGA executive vice president and CEO, noted, "The IATP report immediately lacks credibility because they use as their farmer organization spokesperson a representative of the American Corn Growers Association (ACGA). ACGA has much stronger ties to and support from the environmental extremists than they do from actual corn producers in the U.S. They are not credible representatives for U.S. corn growers."

Concluded Corzine, "The bottom line is that if Bt corn were not economic and effective for those farmers who choose to buy it, it would not and will not survive in the marketplace. Farmers know what works for them and what will return net income to their operations. So far, Bt corn has proven its value in appropriate situations. As long as that continues, farmers will continue to use this tool."

Protecting Grain Quantity, Quality In Storage

Dr. Dennis Calvin
Extension Entomologist

According to the 2000 Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistical Reporting Service (PASS), about 60 million bushels of corn, 5.3 million bushels of oats, and 7.6 million bushels of wheat, are stored at some point in on-farm storage facilities.

This means that Pennsylvania farmers are storing $153, $19, and $8.2 million of corn, wheat, and oats, respectively, in safe deposit boxes on their farm. Unfortunately, these facilities are not secured against insect and pathogen thieves.

National USDA statistics suggest that 10 percent of the grain crop is lost during the period from harvest to the point of feeding or processing. Based on these numbers, insect and pathogen robbers are stealing $18 million from Pennsylvania farmers each year. These figures do not include losses in on-farm stored soybeans and other small grains.

So what can farmers do to prevent losses to these thieves? Unfortunately, the defenses are getting weaker as many grain protectants and fumigants are currently under review by the EPA for continued registration. Grain protectants like Malathion, Reldan, and Actellic, and the fumigant phosphine gas (Fumitox and Phostoxin) are all organophosphates. The fumigant methyl bromide's registration has already been limited to 2005. This will leave us with only biologicals such as Bacillus thuringiensis formulations and inert materials such as diatamaeous earth as protectants and possibly no fumigants in the near future. There are a couple of materials that can be used as crack and crevice treatments.

Fortunately, there are other methods to protect grain. These, however, require farmers to pay much closer attention to grain while it is in storage.

Good stored grain management begins before harvest. You must clean out your harvesting equipment and granary. The first step is to clean out old grain from a bin. This requires getting grain and dust out of cracks and off the walls and ledges. Insects that attack grain are very small and thousands can be harbored in small concentrations of broken grain particles. Never, put newly harvested grain in on top of old grain that is infested with insects. Once old grain has been removed and the bin thoroughly cleaned, new grain can be added. If this grain will be stored for longer than six months, a treatment of a grain protectant will help. In all cases it is a good idea to spray the walls and floor with a barrier treatment before placing grain in the bin.

Grain harvesting equipment can also harbor insect infestations in augers. These areas should all be cleaned out before harvesting begins. Otherwise insects living in the grain residues can be moved into the grains with the first few loads, despite other sanitation efforts. Grain should always be dried to less than 13 percent moisture for long-term storage. If your sanitation procedures are good, you can be assured that the grain going into the holding facility is free of insect infestations. Once the bin is full, a surface treatment is needed to seal the barrier around the grain. If the whole grain mass was treated, a surface treatment is not needed.

Unfortunately, following good sanitation techniques only insures that the grain will be insect free immediately after being placed in the bin. Once in the bin, other physical and biological processes can lead to grain degradation. Moisture migration is a phenomenon that causes pockets of moisture to develop in the grain mass that leads to fungal growth and possible insect activity. In a metal grain bin where the outside temperature is cooler than the inside grain temperature, air circulates in clockwise direction picking up moisture as the temperature warms in the middle of the bin and then drops it out at the top. This moisture then allows the grain to begin imbibing moisture and respiration begins giving off heat. Once temperatures get above a critical level, fungi begin to develop and give off more heat in the process. When the grain mass temperature exceeds 40 to 50°F, then insects can begin to develop and reproduce. During the summer this process is reversed and moisture pockets can build up along the edges of the grain mass.

Because of this relationship between heating and moisture, the bin fan can be your best pest management tool. A good practice is to draw the temperature of the bin below 50°F once the outside temperature is below 50°F. This prevents moisture migration and the development and reproduction of insects that might be in the bin. Once drawn below 50°F, the grain mass will stay cool until well into the summer because of the grain's insulating ability. It is best to keep the grain temperature within 10°F difference of the outside temperature. Do not run the fan to cool the grain unless the air is dry. It is also important to make sure the grain is clean and there are few broken kernels. Broken kernels and other debris allow insects to become established. A number of the common grain infesting species do not establish well without broken kernels.

Other details to pay attention to are: 1) level off the grain mass after the bin is full, 2) use a grain distributor to prevent a column of fine materials in the middle of the bin that will prevent good aeration, 3) eliminate spilled grain from around the bin, 4) keep weeds away from the bin (many grain insects can feed on weed seeds), 5) prevent moisture leakage onto the grain, 6) prevent rodents and birds from contaminating the grain, and 7) use a space fumigant such as dichlorfo resin strips above the grain. Remember, it is important to check the grain once a month for areas of moisture and heat. When these are observed, it is best to draw air into the grain mass to cool it and eliminate the moisture. If you pay close attention to these simple practices, the likelihood of insect contamination and grain quality deterioration is minimal.

When grain is treated with an insecticide, it should be protected up to 18 months; with the exception of malathion which has only a six month period of protection. If the grain is not protected, insects can still invade and begin building up populations. For more information on storing grains, check the 1999-2000 Penn State Agronomy Guide, pg. 47-51, or online at http://AgGuide.agronomy.psu.edu/.

Corn Growers Adopt New Name, Logo

Greg Roth
Associate Professor

Since its inception, the name of our organization has been the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, Inc. In August 2001, the board of directors discussed the issue of the name of the organization and several directors suggested that we remove the word "Master" from our name.

The reasoning was that this would make our name more consistent with other states and that we might eliminate any elitist connotation that might be associated with our name.

We then asked the membership for comments on the name change and received several responses that supported this change. So, in November the board voted to change the name of our organization to The Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association, Inc. (PCGA).

We filed the appropriate legal papers and have notified the National Corn Growers Association of the change. We have also developed a new logo to represent our organization. After careful consideration, the board of directors chose a logo with our state outline and the NCGA corn ear. You'll start to see this more in our Corn Talk and other communications you receive from PCGA.

NCGA-Sponsored Study Proves Energy, Economic Benefits Of Renewable Fuels Standard

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A study sponsored in part by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has concluded that increasing the total gallons of renewable fuels contained in motor vehicle fuels, such as ethanol or biodiesel, from current levels to four percent by 2016 would provide energy security and economic benefits to the U.S.

"A renewable fuels standard as proposed by Sens. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb., and Tim Johnson, D-S.D., would reduce our dependence on foreign oil, improve our trade deficit, boost farm income, create new opportunities for rural businesses, and reduce farm program costs," said John McClelland, director of energy and analysis for NCGA.

McClelland noted that, in addition to Hagel and Johnson, similar RFS bills have been introduced by Sen. Tom Daschle, D-SD, Sen. Tom Harkin, D-IA, and Rep. John Thune, R-At Large SD.

The analysis by John Urbanchuk of AUS Consultants shows that implementing such a renewable fuels standard (RFS) would lead to the annual use of 7.6 billion gallons of ethanol in 2016.

"That level of ethanol use could reduce crude oil imports by 2.9 billion barrels by 2016, an average of 302 million barrels annually," said McClelland. "That equates to approximately one oil supertanker a day for the next 15 years."

He added, "These reductions in imports would lower America's dependence on imported oil to 65 percent compared to the 70 percent projected by the U.S. Department of Energy in 2016."

McClelland said the study cited other benefits that could be achieved by 2016:

- The decrease in oil imports can reduce the U.S. trade deficit by $63.4 billion
- Create 300,000 new American jobs
- Increase U.S. household income by $71 billion.

The projected benefits to agriculture and rural economy include:

- Use 2.5 billion bushels of corn for ethanol production by 2016. Current U.S. corn production is 9.4 billion bushels of which 650 million bushels are used in ethanol production.
- Corn prices will increase an average of 28 cents per bushel. Net farm income will increase an average of $6.6 billion annually. That could reduce direct government payments to farmers $7.8 billion through 2016.
- $10.5 billion in new rural economic investments by 2016 to build or expand the renewable fuel production facilities. Much of this new investment would be through farmer-owned, value-added businesses.

The NCGA, the National Biodiesel Board, and the Renewable Fuels Association sponsored the study. The report is available on the NCGA Website at www.ncga.com.

Harvest Height Study Shows Yield And Quality Differences

Greg Roth
Associate Professor

Harvesting corn for silage at a higher than normal level will reduce yields. But will the increase in forage quality be enough to offset the yield losses. We conducted a trial at our Landisville research station this year to study this issue. We harvested a grain hybrid, Mycogen 2799IMI, at either six or 18 inches from the ground. Each plot was replicated four times and Cumberland Valley Analytical Services conducted the forage analyses.

The increased harvest height reduced yields by 1 ton per acre and increased the dry matter of the silage. The starch content, Net energy, the fiber digestibility, and crude protein were increased with the increased harvest height, however. This could offset the loss in yield in some cases.

| Yield (Tons/a) | 21 0 | 20 0 |
| DM % | 51 4 | 53 6 |
| NeL (Mcal/lb) | 0 72 | 0 75 |
| Starch (%) | 29 7 | 31 1 |
| NDF Digest % | 59 | 64 |
| Crude Protein % | 7 8 | 7 9 |
| Milk/ton DM (lbs ) | 2412 | 2589 |
| $ Milk/ton DM | 289 | 310 |
| Milk/Acre (lbs ) | 17725 | 18122 |
| $ Milk/acre | 2127 | 2174 |

To assess the impact of the improved forage quality we evaluated the potential milk per acre and milk per ton using the new Milk 2000 equation from the University of Wisconsin.

This analysis showed increase in the milk/ton value of the higher cut silage as you might expect, that was about seven percent higher that more than offset the yield reduction of five percent. This is reflected in the slight increase in milk/acre of the higher cut silage.

These results are very similar to those achieved in trials conducted by the University of Wisconsin and Pioneer Hi-Bred International. Pioneer researchers and others have reported that the improvements in forage quality with increased harvest height might be less with some specialty hybrids or where the crop has been drought stunted or killed by frost.

This suggests that in some cases it might pay to harvest corn for silage at the higher height. The Milk 2000 economics estimates are dependent upon greater milk production from the higher quality silage. In situations where the crop yields are high, storage is limited, the haul distance is great, the higher harvest height should be considered. The increase in dry matter content could be a plus if you want to start harvesting earlier, but it could be a minus if the crop was already dry, as it was in our study.

HFCS Developments In Mexico

Under pressure to pass a new budget and revenue provision for the year, the Mexican Congress passed a bill that would place up to a 20 percent tax on soft drinks that contain sweeteners other than cane sugar. "The measure taxes High Fructose Corn Syrup out of the market, and severely hurts U.S. corn exports," said NCGA President Tim Hume.

Use IRM To Protect Bt Technology

Bacillus thuringiensis, or Bt, corn has proven to be an important technology to help the nation's corn growers control damaging insects and produce higher yields and better quality grain. To preserve the benefits of Bt corn technology for growers, the NCGA recommends the implementation of Insect Resistance Management (IRM) practices.

Oil And MTBE Groups Attack Ethanol

The NCGA is expecting the new session of Congress will implement a nationwide renewable fuels standard (RFS). In 2001, NCGA's Ethanol Marketing Committee, the main force behind the Corn Growers' push for an RFS, witnessed a year filled with optimistic talk of such legislation.

However, the group knew that the petroleum industry would fight the RFS every step of the way, and it looks like the battle is heating up.

In a recent letter to Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-SD, and Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-MS. several oil industry representatives attacked ethanol and a renewable fuels standard. These organizations claim that implementing an RFS would adversely affect the economy, environment and fuel supply.

The letter portrayed a mandated ethanol standard as being disruptive and ill conceived, and urged the Senators to oppose an ethanol standard. Those signing the letter include a group of refiners and MTBE producers. However, the American Petroleum Institute (API), which represents the major oil companies, did not sign the letter.

Corn Growers Applaud Ethanol Production Record

For the third month in a row, the ethanol industry has set an all-time monthly production record. "Ethanol is a growing industry," said John McClelland, NCGA's in-house expert on ethanol. "Production records indicate that demand is high and that our ethanol supply will readily expand to meet any increases in demand." The previous record, set in October 2001, was shattered in November as production reached 126,000 barrels of ethanol per day — that is a rate of 1.93 billion gallons annually. The production information is based on data released by the U.S. Energy Information Administration.

The Renewable Fuels Association reported November's production was up almost 16 percent from the previous year when only 109,000 barrels of ethanol were produced per day in November of 2000. With record levels of production throughout the year, experts predict nearly 1.8 billion gallons of ethanol were produced in 2001.

A recent study released by the NCGA revealed that increasing the total gallons of renewable fuels contained in motor vehicle fuels from current levels to four percent by 2016 would decrease oil imports and reduce the U.S. trade deficit by $63.4 billion. It would also create 300,000 new American jobs, and increase U.S. household income by $71 billion.

Of significant importance to corn growers the study revealed that if ethanol supplied four percent of the nation's fuel, corn prices would increase an average of 28 cents per bushel. Net farm income would also increase an average of $6.6 billion annually, resulting in reduced direct government payments to farmers by $7.8 billion through 2016.

Across the nation, 17 ethanol plants are under construction. The new refineries will potentially add more than 450 million gallons of ethanol production capacity.

NCGA President Looks Forward

The NCGA has met — and exceeded — many goals over the past year: passage of Trade Promotion Authority (TPA) in the House of Representatives, the successful promotion of ethanol to boost energy security and proving — through sound science — biotechnology presents great opportunities for higher yields and higher quality crops to farmers who need it and have determined there is a market for their harvested grain.

But an organization is only as good as what it accomplishes in the present and NCGA President Tim Hume realizes this. "I'm pretty happy with what we've been able to do in 2001," he said, "but there is still more that needs to be done."

Big Victories for Big Rocks NCGA's Year In Review

What a year for the nation and the nation's corn growers. The NCGA is closing another successful year. Many of NCGA's "Big Rocks" (Ethanol, Trade, Research, Transportation, Farm Bill, and Biotechnology) have seen big victories over the last 12 months as corn growers around the country have joined together to make their voices heard on these matters.

One of the stories that just never seemed to go away was the claim that Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) corn harmed Monarch butterflies. A Cornell report released more than two years ago stated the pollen of Bt corn affected the larvae of the butterflies and those who opposed biotechnology picked up the banner, using rumor and hearsay over the facts and sound science.

NCGA's Best And Brightest To Attend Leadership Training

Current and future leaders of the NCGA will attend a leadership training conference Jan. 28-31 in Washington, D.C. The conference, sponsored by Syngenta Crop Protection, provides training to growers who are currently state association presidents and those who are just beginning service on a state association board.

Sierra Club, Others, Want Alternative Fuel Vehicle Rule Enforced

Several environmental groups have filed suit against the federal government hoping to enforce the Energy Policy Act, a 1992 law that mandates the government to buy a certain percentage of alternative fuel vehicles. The suit was filed in federal court in San Francisco, Calif., against 18 federal agencies. The plaintiffs contend that the agencies failed to comply with the vehicle purchase requirement, which mandates that 75 percent of new purchases be of alternative fuel vehicles.

The purchase requirement was based on a desire to help wean the U.S. away from total dependence on foreign oil supplies. The plaintiffs claim that the agencies have failed to meet the law's requirement, and they expect to use the suit to compel agency compliance.

World Corn Production

In 2000, world corn production totaled 23 billion bushels. The U.S. produced about 43 percent of this or 9.9 billion bushels. China was the second largest producer, accounting for 18 percent of the world crop followed by the European Union at seven percent and Brazil at six percent. Mexico and Argentina each produced three percent of the world's corn that year. Total world corn consumption in 2000 exceeded production and totaled 23.8 billion bushels.

Grower Testimony Calls For Upgrades In GPSA Grain Standards

As a grower who is directly impacted by work of the Grain Inspection, Packers and Stockyards Administration (GIPSA), Mike Clark, president of the Illinois Corn Growers Association, testified recently to the U.S. Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry that the government should review GIPSA's standards and the manner in which they are enforced.

Clark testified on behalf of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), American Soybean Association (ASA), and the National Association of What Growers (NAWG).

"As we enter the new century, we should take the time to review how our government operates and ask ourselves: Is there a better way?" Clark said, noting that while GIPSA is to be commended for its efforts in modernizing in its operation, little has been done to bring grain standards into the 21st Century.

"As you well know, U.S. producers must export a significant portion of their crop each year to remain solvent. This requires us to compete on a world market against well-positioned competitors," he said.

"Across the globe, world grain buyers have grown more sophisticated in their buying requirements, yet we continue to rely on standards that largely only describe external characteristics."

Current U.S. grain standards measure only volume and outward appearance, and very few inspection standards exist to give grain buyers the information they really want: The end-use characteristics of the crop.

"We need to harness the continued advances being made in technology to bring about a reliable and quick test that will predict the intrinsic qualities desired by the end user," Clark said. "In addition, we must retain the flexibility to adapt such standards as new technologies are developed."

Variety Of GMO Tests Are Available To Farmers

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Farmers who grow non-GMO (genetically modified organism) crops for specialty markets can utilize a variety of tests that determine whether or not their crop is truly GMO-free.

Ohio State University researchers have outlined a number of tests available that measure the level of herbicide and insect tolerance of such crops as corn or soybeans. "These tests are commonly used by grain elevators, crop consultants and others when they check grain before it's sent off to market," said Ohio State agronomist Peter Thomison.

Thomison said such tests could tell farmers what percentage of their crop, if any, contains GMOs, and would allow them to compete in national and international markets where non-GMO certification standards are strict.

Currently the standard for GMO certification is set at zero tolerance, although several proposals have been developed to set the maximum allowable levels between one and three percent. Japan recently established new legislation that sets a zero tolerance for seed and food imports containing unapproved biotech material. StarLink corn is an example of such a product. Japanese legislation also outlines food products containing less than five percent of approved biotech crops to be labeled as non-GMOs. The European Union (EU) has also proposed rules on the labeling of foods containing GMOs, stating that accidental traces of GMOs would be allowed in food and feed up to a maximum of one percent without being subject to labeling requirements.

"I would imagine a grower would be in quite a bind if the contamination level of his crop exceeded that one percent or the tolerance level that is set by the end user. He'd have to sell his corn or soybeans at the conventional market," said Thomison. "This is something that organic producers are concerned about. They want to make sure their end users are willing to take their products and these tests will help them achieve that."

The most common types of GMO tests used include herbicide bioassays, ELISA (enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay) tests and the PCR (polymerase chain reaction) method.

Herbicide bioassays are used to detect GMO herbicide-resistant traits in Roundup Ready and Liberty Link soybeans. The test involves placing seeds in a germination medium containing diluted solution with the herbicide or directly spraying the seeds with the herbicide. Seeds that develop normally test positive for the GMO herbicide trait, while those that die or do not develop normally are considered GMO-free. The assay is inexpensive ($20-$30), but takes up to a week to obtain results.

ELISA tests detect for the presence of a specific protein that the GMO DNA produces in the plant. Several versions of the ELISA test exist, including the "strip test" or "dipstick" procedure that uses lateral flow strips and delivers results in two to five minutes, and the "plate test" that uses color intensity to determine what percentage of the GMO is present.

The PCR method is more accurate than ELISA tests in that it measures exactly where the GMO is present on the DNA gene sequence. The PCR method is advantageous due to its sensitivity, but takes up to three days to complete and is expensive ($75-$300 per sample).

"A typical procedure for a food-grade corn or soybean producer, for example, might be for him to test samples or ask a certifying association to come out and monitor his field throughout the season," said Thomison. "The association would then certify his field as non-GMO and finalize the procedure by taking samples of grain from the field and checking it in their lab. The grower would then present that certification to the end user, who would probably turn around and retest the product again."

Thomison said the tests are designed to identify traits of different GMO "events," such as Bt-corn, or Roundup Ready or Liberty Link herbicide-resistant soybeans. He said end users would subject a farmer's grain to a battery of tests based on the types of crops grown in Ohio and how prevalent the GMO "events" would be. Currently six GMO "events" exist. Rootworm Bt, a new GMO "event", is expected to be released to the market next year.

"While there is a sizable number of farmers who want GMO crops, there are also a number who don't want them either. Some farmers don't want GMO crops because they have reservations about possible risk to human health and adverse effects to the environment. Others are somewhat indifferent to the GMO issue and are trying to take advantage of the market that is there," said Thomison.

"The industry hopes that the furor of GMO products will die down when the public sees there are no negative issues resulting from the use of GMO products," said Thomison. GMO corn grown in Ohio is less than five percent, while GMO soybeans with regard to Roundup Ready tolerance is nearly 70 percent.

Herbicide Varieties Effectively Control Winter Annual Weeds

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The struggle to effectively manage winter annual weeds may get easier for corn and soybean farmers.

Ohio State University weed scientists have identified several herbicides that help control common chickweed and purple deadnettle with at least 90 percent effectiveness in no-till corn and soybean fields.

Mark Loux, an Ohio State weed specialist, said the purpose of the research was to provide management options for controlling problematic winter annual weeds.

"The activity of glyphosate (more commonly known as Roundup) in the spring before planting has been slow under cool conditions. It just wasn't killing the weeds fast enough," said Loux. "Over the past two or three years, the winter annual population has just soared and I suspect it's due in part to shifts in herbicide use. The issue here is how can we better manage these weeds?"

Common chickweed and purple deadnettle, which primarily emerge in late summer or fall, tend to cause headaches for farmers. They prevent the soil from drying out and warming up in the spring; they interfere with tillage because they grow so thick they snag equipment: and they harbor insects or serve as insect hosts. Research has shown that purple deadnettle may serve as an alternative host of soybean cyst nematode, a pathogen that damages soybeans by feeding on plant roots, robbing the plants of nutrients, and providing wound sites for root-rotting fungi to enter.

Researchers found that fall treatments provided more consistent control than spring applications. Among soybean herbicides studied, for example, only three provided 80 percent control of weeds when applied in March, but 10 provided 90 percent control when applied in November. Researchers analyzed herbicides with at least 20 different active ingredients.

Loux theorizes that smaller plant size and warmer soils in the fall may attribute to more effective fall herbicide applications. "I think the plants are smaller in the fall. Their growth rate hasn't geared up yet in early spring. Plus colder weather in the spring may prevent the rapid herbicide activity and plant death needed so a farmer can plant his field," said Loux. "The issue here is crop establishment. If a farmer is having difficulty in getting his crop established in the spring due to winter annual weeds, then he may need to consider a fall application.

"We are not saying that fall herbicide applications are always better than spring applications. Both can be effective," said Loux. "But it just may be a better strategy for the same money to use a fall herbicide that has good residual that can carry through spring."

Loux said by applying herbicides in the fall, even under cool conditions, gives a farmer a better chance of establishing his field for planting. "If a farmer is planting in April and applies the herbicide in March, that only gives him few weeks to get that weed out of his field before planting," said Loux. "That's really not that much time."

Farmers are recommended to apply fall herbicides now through mid-November. Research has found that herbicides perform well even when applied under cold conditions, so applying herbicides through early December may also be an option.

Childs Walks Away With NCGA CYC For Third Consecutive Year

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — For the third consecutive year, Francis Childs of Manchester, Iowa, with a record-breaking yield of 408.2 bushels per acre, has once again walked away with the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) 2001 National Corn Yield Contest (NCYC). The previous record was 393.7 bushels per acre fielded by, (surprise!) Childs.

He wasn't alone in his success. More than 3,200 growers from 45 states entered the contest. The resulting top yields from farmers who placed first, second and third places in the respective categories ranged from 408.2 to 224.8 bushels per acre.

Success in the face of adversity was the story of corn growers in 2001. Nature sent the usual challenges of flood, hail, drought and heat. "The NCYC's goal is to educate farmers on improving their methods of production to increase profitability while addressing environmental concerns," said Tim Hume, NCGA president and corn grower from Walsh, Colo.

As an example of the environmental concerns, this year's national winners used an average of .95 pounds of nitrogen per bushel of yield, well within accepted agronomic recommendations. "This contest showcases the production potential of corn, the nation's number-one crop and our growers certainly did that this year," Hume said.

Hume went on to say, using another sports example, the Corn Yield Contest is similar to setting the land speed record with a car. "Only a few people can actually do it, but the rest of us are interested in the potential an automobile has."

Winners of this year's NCYC will be recognized at the 2002 Commodity Classic, the annual combined convention of the NCGA and the American Soybean Association, Feb. 21-23 in Nashville, Tenn. Along with national recognition, winners receive prizes from sponsoring seed companies and crop protection companies.

Contest participants also improve their operations by getting a unique opportunity to compare their own proven corn production capabilities with farmers in their states and across the country.

"As we close the 2001 contest and begin work on 2002," Hume concluded, "we thank the harvest supervisors in the communities for the hard work that keeps the National Corn Yield Contest a high-quality, credible contest. Finally, we congratulate the contestants and look forward to seeing their entries in the 2002 contest."
